MIAMI (AP)—A disabled DC-4 cargo plane that crashed into a busy Miami street Monday killing 10 persons had undergone repairs for a mechanical problem shortly before takeoff, a Federal Aviation Administration official said today.

"It had been scheduled to depart about noon but had to return for repairs after taxiing out on the runway," said Richard Skully. "I'm not certain what the problem was."

The four engine craft took off at 3:40 p.m. Eight minutes later it came down on a residential and business area, a mile east of Miami's International Airport, cutting a four-block swath of death and flaming destruction.

Police today sealed off the area to everyone as investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board searched charred rubble and wreckage where 10 people were killed and another dozen were injured.

"I'm certain the investigators will look into the plane's mechanical problem," Skully said.

A spokesman for Dominicana Air Lines, owner of the converted cargo craft, confirmed the flight had been delayed. He said the mechanic who made the repairs was not available for comment.

The victims included the four crew members and six people on the ground. Five of the dead were in an automobile body shop demolished by the flaming fuselage, said Miami police information officer Jack Minix.

"The other victim was a passenger in a car a block from the body shop," Minix said. "He had jumped out of the car and tried to get away from the burning wreckage when he was hit by a piece of the plane."

about 40 feet from the rear of the building when the plane came down.

He ran to the front of the shop where he said he saw Knapp standing dazed in front of the wreckage. "Have you seen my boys? Have you seen my boys?" Burmester said Knapp asked.

Knapp's sons Clyde, 17, and Clifford, 15, were among the first victims identified. Others killed in the shop, according to Minix, were Edward Snow, a worker; and Cornelia Snow, his wife who had come to pick him up; and James Moore, shop foreman.

Burmester said Knapp's sons were in the shop because their father was short of help and they "wanted to help out."

Minix said James Zaccarelli of Miami was the automobile passenger killed a block from the shop. The driver, an 18-year-old boy, suffered second degree burns over 30 per cent of his body, Minix said.

The plane was bound for Santa Domingo loaded with auto parts and general cargo. Crew members were identified as Capt. Jorge Bujosa, pilot; Carlos Brador, copilot; Carlos Gonzalez, engineer, and Cesar Molina, an employee of the air line hitching a ride to the Dominican Republic.

Circling Back

The craft was attempting to circle back to the airport when it came down just a mile from a runway cleared for an emergency landing. One engine was ablaze and another was out.

Over-all damage was estimated at $1 million. One building was destroyed, eight were damaged and 42 cars and trucks were damaged or burned out.

Minix said he was convinced all bodies had been removed from the smoking rubble.

Maxine Burmester's apartment home is next door to the body shop where five were killed. She was watching television Monday afternoon as the plane sheared power lines a block and a half from her building and bounced off the roof top of a two-story building.

"It was coming at a terrific speed," she said. "I couldn't move before it hit."

Hit Apartment

A wing struck the corner of the Burmester's apartment building about a dozen feet from where she sat.

The plane crumpled the second story of a medical center a half block away, skipped over a bakery, plowed a furrow in the roof of the next building, knocked over the pumps of a gasoline station, and slammed into Charles Knapp's body shop.

Pieces of fuselage and debris from the buildings along 36th Street continued on down the street for another 100 yards. One engine demolished a car 20 yards from the shop.

Burning fuel spilled from the plane's ruptured tanks and from the service station pumps. Flames climbed 150 feet in the air. Black smoke could be seen 10 miles at sea. Fourteen fire trucks fought the fire for 30 minutes before bringing it under control.

Mrs. Burmester's husband, Edward, had just left the Knapp shop and was in his back yard.

Later Monday, in a separate session with newsmen, Laird said one Safeguard would defend some of the silos.

Only a few SS9s are now deployed, Laird said, but by 1975 as many as 420 would be in operation, threatening a substantial portion of the 1,000 Minuteman missiles.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., said apparent disagreement in views between the defense and espionage establishments arose because the different agencies were speaking out of different time frameworks "and we're dealing with a fast-changing picture."

"They agree it appears from the intelligence the Soviets are going beyond what is required to demolish our cities and knock out our industrial complex," Mundt said.

"It seems designed to knock out our retaliatory capacity. They did not tell the committee the Russians had enough to get the job done, but only they are moving in that direction."

Helms and Laird both were careful, Mundt said, not to try assessing Russian intentions.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., said he was convinced there never was any substantive disagreement.

Dodd said he felt the testimony did not hurt the case for the ABM, adding, "I don't see how any opponent could take any comfort from the evidence."

Reporter Won Fame For Exposure of Union Racketeering

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Westbrook Pegler, a reporter who gained national fame during the 1920s as a sports writer and won a Pulitzer Prize in 1941 for his exposure of labor union racketeering, died here early today. He was 74.

Pegler's physician said he died of congestive heart failure. Pegler underwent surgery for a colon resection last Wednesday. He had been admitted to St. Mary's Hospital June 9.

Pegler had been living in southern Arizona since 1942, writing free lance articles and contributing opinion columns to King Features Syndicate, owned by the Hearst Corp.

Vital Matters

However, on Aug. 13, 1962, the crusty journalist who it has been said "used his typewriter like a meat ax," parted company with the syndicate. The official reason given in a formal announcement was because of "irreconcilable differences on vital matters." Pegler had complained for many years that the Hearst organization was censoring him.

The immediate cause of the announcement was believed to have been a talk given by Pegler the week before to a meeting of the ultra conservative Anti-Communist Christian Crusade in Tulsa, Okla.

In later years Pegler had contributed articles to the monthly magazine, American Opinion, published by the John Birch Society, another conservative group.

Stopped Writing

But he stopped writing for it when the head of the society, Robert Welch, refused to publish one of his articles in April, 1964.

"For some reason he killed my article," said Pegler. "I had enough of that with Hearst. I don't have to take it any more."

Pegler's journalistic career began when he was 22.

He was a correspondent on the European staff of the United Press from 1916 and 1918, spending a year of that time reporting on the American troops fighting in World War I.

Laird Changing Figures to Add Weight To ABM Proposal, Senate Critics Say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate critics of President Nixon's Safeguard missile defense program claim Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird has redefined in mid-controversy the Soviets' first-strike nuclear capability in an attempt to support the administration position.

Sens. J. W. Fulbright and Albert Gore made the charges following Laird's joint appearance Monday with CIA Director Richard Helms before a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Laird and Helms were called to testify in the wake of Safeguard critics' claims that the Pentagon and CIA had conflicted views on Soviet missile intentions.

Meaning Changed

Fulbright, the Arkansas Democrat who heads the committee, and Gore, D-Tenn., said they felt the meaning of "first strike capability" had been completely changed by Laird's Monday testimony.

Laird now applies the term to Soviet potential for knocking out American Minutemen sites with the new powerful SS9 rocket, the senators said, without considering United States Polaris submarines.

Fulbright said he had always thought the term meant "the capacity to destroy the retaliatory capacity of your opponent—a knockout blow."

"If the term has no meaning other than a particular weapon, then it would seem the justification for ABM dissolves," Gore said.

Fulbright said the secretary's testimony showed less of a threat to the United States from the Soviet Union than was indicated in Laird's first appearance and "less of a reason than ever before" to proceed with the ABM.

Laird said he would stand on his previous testimony about the first strike power of the triple warhead SS9 Soviet missile. He also referred newsmen to his recent testimony before the House Appropriations Committee which said the SS9 solely threatened Minutemen.

"I believe that the SS9 that is being deployed in increasing numbers is a weapon that has a first strike capability against hardened missile sites, specifically our Minutemen," Laird said.

Defend Silas

Later Monday, in a separate session with newsmen, Laird said one Safeguard would defend some of the silos.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., said apparent disagreement in views between the defense and espionage establishments arose because the different agencies were speaking out of different time frameworks "and we're dealing with a fast-changing picture."

"They agree it appears from the intelligence the Soviets are going beyond what is required to demolish our cities and knock out our industrial complex," Mundt said.

"It seems designed to knock out our retaliatory capacity. They did not tell the committee the Russians had enough to get the job done, but only they are moving in that direction."

Helms and Laird both were careful, Mundt said, not to try assessing Russian intentions.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., said he was convinced there never was any substantive disagreement.

Dodd said he felt the testimony did not hurt the case for the ABM, adding, "I don't see how any opponent could take any comfort from the evidence."

$45 Million Accident Kept Secret

Fire Stops Nuclear Missile Production

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. nuclear missile production has been halted for perhaps the rest of this year because of a crippling fire at an Atomic Energy Commission plant.

A News Special

This rather stunning situation—still undisclosed publicly by the government—is disclosed in the back section of a 1,400-page volume of official testimony recently released by a Senate appropriations subcommittee.

Government sources also give strong indications that testing of antimissile warheads may be delayed by the blaze that hit a plutonium-handling facility at Rocky Flats, Colo., May 11. The official AEC position is that of "very urgent."

Safeguard deployment schedules will not be setback.

The impact of the fire, first chairman, termed the $45 million request to get the Rocky Flats plant back into operation, closed doors nine days later, "very urgent."

If we didn't receive the additional appropriation it would delay by an undetermined amount, Wash., or at the Los Alamos research center in New Mexico.

Los Alamos, however, has only "a laboratory capability" to turn out test warheads, and Hanford has only "elements of an obsolete production line," Giller said.

Produce Parts

Hanford was put on standby several years ago but its equipment "may be useful in assisting in the production of plutonium parts for the test program," he added.

The AEC, Giller said, has no indication sabotage was involved in the fire, but an independent fire investigation company has been assigned to check such a possibility as it seeks the cause of the blaze.

Giller pointed out this was the first instance "of any such fire, which are than shipped to our assembly plants at Amarillo, Tex., and to Burlington, Iowa, where they wait for the parts from Rocky Flats to catch up, which make the final assembly."

The AEC has eight nuclear pealed for $45 million to make repairs.

Most nuclear weapons require plutonium to trigger their atomic warheads.

Air Force Maj. Gen. E. B. Giller, assigned to the AEC, told subcommittee members the impact on the weapons production schedule would last "a few months to perhaps a year," according to preliminary estimates.

Sen. Allen Ellender, D-La., asked Giller: "Will this fire retard you in the production of all missiles?"

Giller's immediate words in reply were deleted from the transcript but then he said: "We are estimating at this time the proposed Safeguard missile at moment six months plus or minus three, meaning a maximum of nine months."

Most nuclear weapons require plutonium to trigger their atomic warheads.

Air Force Maj. Gen. E. B. Giller, assigned to the AEC, told subcommittee members the impact on the weapons production schedule would last "a few months to perhaps a year," according to preliminary estimates.

Sen. Allen Ellender, D-La., asked Giller: "Will this fire retard you in the production of all missiles?"

Giller's immediate words in reply were deleted from the transcript but then he said: "We are estimating at this time the proposed Safeguard missile at moment six months plus or minus three, meaning a maximum of nine months."

"Very Urgent"

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, AEC chairman, termed the $45 million request to get the Rocky Flats plant back into operation, closed doors nine days later, "very urgent."

If we didn't receive the additional appropriation it would delay by an undetermined amount, Wash., or at the Los Alamos research center in New Mexico.

Los Alamos, however, has only "a laboratory capability" to turn out test warheads, and Hanford has only "elements of an obsolete production line," Giller said.

Produce Parts

Hanford was put on standby several years ago but its equipment "may be useful in assisting in the production of plutonium parts for the test program," he added.

The AEC, Giller said, has no indication sabotage was involved in the fire, but an independent fire investigation company has been assigned to check such a possibility as it seeks the cause of the blaze.

Giller pointed out this was the first instance "of any such fire, which are than shipped to our assembly plants at Amarillo, Tex., and to Burlington, Iowa, where they wait for the parts from Rocky Flats to catch up, which make the final assembly."

Israelis Claim Downing of Egyptian MIG

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Israeli warplanes shot down an Egyptian MIG today over the Gulf of Suez, an Israeli army spokesman said.

He said the plane was hit by cannon fire from an Israeli fighter, exploded in the air and crashed in Egyptian territory. No parachute was seen.

Earlier, Israeli spokesmen reported Egyptian commandos slipped across the Suez Canal for the third time in three days to raid an Israeli army position. They battled the Israelis with light arms and grenades.

Israeli army spokesmen said the Arabs crossed north of Port Taufiq at the southern end of the canal under a covering artillery barrage late Monday night. They said one Israeli soldier was killed.

Killed Soldiers
A communique from Cairo said the Egyptians "occupied the Israeli position and killed all the soldiers there and destroyed two armored cars." It added that the Israelis tried to make a counterassault "but our forces foiled the attempt" and returned safely to their base carrying two wounded.

On Sunday night three Egyptians were killed in a raid on the same installation. The Israeli

Nomination of Finch Choice For Aide Could Split GOP

By JOHN M. PEARCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert H. Finch, long a confident and political ally of President Nixon, apparently has won his fight to have Dr. John H. Knowles nominated as the nation's No. 1 health officer. But the victory raises the specter of a party-splitting battle in the Senate, with the administration and a coalition of generally liberal GOP Young Turks pitted against the venerable Republican leader, Everett M. Dirksen.

It was learned Monday night Nixon is almost certain to nominate Knowles as assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs in the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

Opposed By AMA

Knowles, HEW Secretary Finch's long-time choice, has been opposed by powerful officials in the American Medical Association and their prominent ally, Dirksen.

Knowles is director of Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, and until Monday the AMA opposition had been attributed to his advocacy of such things as universal health care plans.

But a Wheaton, Md., physician, Dr. James J. Nordlund, said in a letter to The Washington Post that Dirksen's administrative assistant, John R. Gornien, had told him that "because of the heavy financial support given the Republicans during the recent elections, the American Medical Association was insistent on nominating one assistant secretary, in particular the assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs."

No Denial

Gornien did not deny the report. The AMA had no comment.

Knowles said at his Massachusetts summer home Monday night the unofficial reports were "news to me. I haven't heard a peep."

If Dirksen sticks to his opposition, the issue of who is to be assistant secretary will pale before the larger issue of who controls presidential nominations, the President or Sen. Dirksen.

Dirksen claims credit for blocking other Nixon appointments and for forcing the removal of one holdover Democratic official.

But the Illinois senator has no liking for a showdown that could, if he lost, seriously damage his prestige as party leader and thus crimp his power.

Dirksen Agility
Dirksen has been noted in the past for his agility in changing positions on major issues and personalities, but has been un-

Contaminant Killing Fish In Rhine River

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — Health officials shut off water supplies from the Rhine River in Amsterdam today because of a mysterious contamination which is reported to have killed millions of fish.

After purification, the Rhine normally supplies drinking water for half of Amsterdam's 13 million people.

Rural Fond du Lac Girl Killed by Car Monday

A Fond du Lac County girl died Monday night, bringing Wisconsin's 1969 traffic fatality count to 449—compared with 524 on this date in record 1968.

Roxanne Altman, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Altman of rural Fond du Lac, was struck and killed by a car Monday as she ran across Highway 151 near her home.

cording to the governor's office, was set up by Deputy Secretary of Administration Glenn Pommerening.

Gov. Warren P. Knowles is in Switzerland and did not attend. State voters this year approved a constitutional amendment allowing the state to borrow money directly. Up to now, the state has been getting around a constitutional ban on such borrowing by forming dummy corporations.

One of the decisions facing the state is where to place the controls of the borrowing—in a new unit within the department of administration, which is controlled by the governor, or in the Building Commission, which is controlled by the governor, or in the Building Commission, which is controlled by legislators.

Commission Chairmen

The governor, however, serves as commission chairman.

The group worked on a draft of a bill that would set up a borrowing board in the executive branch which would include the governor, treasurer, attorney general, administration secretary and a private citizen.

State Assemblyman David Martin, R-Neenah, who attended the meeting, and other legislators believe the authority should be vested in the Building Commission to keep the responsibilities of building and financing closely tied.

Martin is vice chairman of the commission.

Other legislators at the meeting included Sen. Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond; Sen. Fred Risser, D-Madison; Assembly Speaker Harold Froehlich, R-Appleton, and Assemblyman Frank Nikolay, D-Abbotsford.

Cassius Clay Wiretap Memo Altered by FBI

Justice Department Claims It Didn't Know of Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has admitted the FBI changed—without informing the Justice Department—a recorded log of wiretapped conversations involving former heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay.

In disclosing this to Clay's attorneys, the department Monday contended it did not learn of the FBI action until June 13, several days after copies of what were purported to be the original logs were filed in U.S. District Court in Houston.

John S. Martin Jr. and Michael T. Epstein, who are handling the government's case against Clay, said the original record contained the notation, "Sum up in memo."

Phrase Blanked Out

But the hand-written phrase was blanked out on documents submitted to the court concerning a Sept. 4, 1964, telephone conversation between Clay and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The discrepancy came to light when Clay's lawyers, unsatisfied with copies, demanded to see the original transcripts. Epstein and Martin then checked with the FBI and found the penne-in portion was left off copies submitted in court.

Government attorneys were unhappy about the affair, expressing concern that the differences would cast doubts on the validity of the documents themselves.

No reason was given for the omission. The FBI had no comment. And special FBI Agent Robert R. Nichols, who supervised the tap on King's telephone, claimed in an affidavit the notation was of no consequence.

Notes to Himself
"When I initially scanned this log," Nichols said, "I made the handwritten notation 'sum up in memo,' as a flag to myself to consider this as an item to be placed in memorandum form."

"Upon subsequent detailed review of the entire log and evaluation of its contents," he added, "I decided the substance of the information did not warrant the preparation of a memorandum."

As summarized in the record, the conversation which Nichols considered unimportant was one in which Clay advised King to "watch out for them whites."

Clay, sentenced to five years' imprisonment for refusing induction into the armed forces, is seeking further federal court hearings in an effort to overturn his conviction.

'Squares' Fight Takeovers

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Lee Edwards, assistant chairman of the group of students who call themselves "squares," said the "squares," whose organization is officially called the National Student Conference in Revolution, are holding a week-long workshop at Lake Forest College to perfect counter tactics to be used against disruptive college demonstrators.

One of the tactics, to be practiced later this week, is a locked-arm wall of coeds to block demonstrators from entering and seizing campus buildings.

"We have worked hard to obtain our education, and we will work just as hard to prevent our college opportunity from being taken away from us," one convention participant said Monday.

In addition to the workshops, the students are attending lectures, panel discussion and debates dealing with contemporary revolution.

"It's too bad that our system is in danger of being destroyed over the demands of a few for total personal freedom," former Minnesota Congressman Walter Judd told one panel group.

Judd said the Students for a Democratic Society, a radical group active in many student demonstrations, is "part of the worldwide Communist movement" and urged students to organize to defeat it.

"One thing is certain," said Ed Butler, 34, chairman of the conference, "the revolution cannot be stopped. It can only be won or lost."

Poisoned Arachnids Sought

Spiders by the Dozens

By RICHARD E. MEYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man walked in and plunked a spider down on Delona Davis' desk. Her big, gray-blue eyes got bigger and grayer. But she didn't scream.

The critter was in a pill bottle. He was dead. Besides, she was getting used to it. This kind of thing had been going on dozens of times a day for more than two weeks.

As receptionist for the county health office, the little brunette has been deluged with spiders, of all shapes, colors and sizes—dead and alive—since the beginning of the South American violin spider hunt. She prefers them dead.

Size of a Dime
It started when Mel Thompson, a naturalist, found one of the brown violin spiders—about the size of a dime—in a suburban Sierra Madre park. Drop for drop, the violin spider's venom is deadlier than a rattlesnake's.

Thompson found 54 more in a recreation building at the park. Then researchers from the University of Southern California found a dozen in a nearby women's club and a church.

The county dispatched eight tweezer-packing spider hunters, armed with specimen vials and flashlights.

Building by building, nook by cranny, the hunters turned up spider after spider. Grand total: 103.

Quite a find, since South American violin spiders—named for the light violin-shaped marking on their backs—had been seen but once before in North America. That was six years ago in Cambridge, Mass.

Meanwhile, nearly every time the mailman arrived at Delona Davis' desk, he brought in a batch of spiders, most of them dead, in envelopes. And it seemed every third person who walked in the door had one in a jar, a matchbox or a pill bottle.

"They're trying to help," she said. "But some of those spiders are pretty ugly. We get some pretty big ones sometimes. And when they're not dead, forget it!"

Few of the hundreds brought in were South American violin spiders. And nobody has reported being bitten.

William Waldron, county entomologist, said he hopes to learn more about the spiders' life habits—and how they got here from South America.

Proxmire to Request Charges be Checked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says he will request a Justice Department investigation of charges that five Air Force officers accepted jobs with the manufacturer of a missile system after they had blocked efforts to cut back its mounting costs.

An aide said Monday a letter to Atty Gen John N. Mitchell is being drafted by Proxmire and will be sent shortly.

The charges came during a Senate-House subcommittee inquiry into weapons costs. The contracts involved the guidance system for the Minuteman II missile being built in the Anaheim, Calif., plant of Autonetics Corp.

The five officers reportedly were later hired by the company or its corporate parent, North American Rockwell.

There Are Times when a box social can be a pretty serious business, especially if everything tastes so good that it's hard to decide whether to take a sip of this or a bite of that. For Mark Benyo and his sister, Lily, it was the beverage that won out—momentarily at least.

Children Make Friends at Box Social

Shoeboxes Aren't just for shoes.

Sometimes they're for delicious sandwiches, crisp apples and mouthwatering cupcakes and cookies, waiting to be discovered beneath a lid decorated with colorful drawings and paper cutouts.

That's the way it was Wednesday noon at St. Pius playground and other playgrounds and parks around the city, where children participating in the Appleton Recreation Department's summer program gathered for box socials.

The event was just one of many to help the children get acquainted with each other during the program's first week. And no doubt, many a new friendship was formed when the tasty contents were shared.

After all, that's what box socials are for.

When Three Little boys get together at a box social, food is bound to become the medium of exchange. Doing a bit of undercover bartering are Scott Lillge, Tim Sheridan and John Grimmer.

Surrounded by Shoeboxes transformed into colorful lunchboxes, Jan and Sandy Brinkman note with interest what their tablemates brought to eat, as they enjoy their own tasty lunches. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Women Urged to Demand Recognition for Their Actions

BY JAN WOOD
Special to The Post-Crescent

MADISON — If women aren't given enough credit for volunteer work, it's their own fault. That was the declaration a national women's leader made to the governor's commission on the status of women and 120 representatives of state organizations Thursday.

According to the speaker, Mrs. Elizabeth D. Koontz, some women are so modest about their accomplishments they let others take the credit. "It doesn't matter what you do if no one knows," said Mrs. Koontz, recently appointed director of the Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor.

Mrs. Koontz, who met briefly with Gov. Warren Knowles, told the women that because of this lack of communication even the governor didn't know the significance of the work of the Wisconsin Commission. "He said that all the commission tries to do is get its members into public office," she reported. "And if this is all he gets, then you'd better figure out where the information gets stopped and then get it around the block to him."

Poor Have Pride

Mrs. Koontz said that women have done "all the yelling" about air pollution, but the congressman who introduces the bill in congress gets all the credit. "What about women who campaign for their congressmen door to door and by licking stamps?" she asked. "And then what happens when the same woman wants to run for office?"

She was also concerned about the U.S. attitudes toward working mothers and those receiving welfare. "We have to understand that people have pride even though they're poor," she said.

She suggested that when a group gives the needy second-hand clothing they put them on racks.

"Even if the mother only pays 25 cents, at least she went in, picked out the article of clothing and paid for it herself."

She spoke of the evolution of a different attitude toward the working mother. "Women found that they had to work because starvation was involved," she said. "And they expected to have the right to work."

The Wisconsin Governor's Commission on the Status of Women was praised by Mrs. Koontz as "probably one of the finest we have." She also gave her estimation as to the worth of U.S. volunteer women's groups.

"The work you do will be worth $30 billion annually by 1980 so we're not playing games. Volunteer action has been a hallmark of the American way."

Topics of Concern Defined

Mrs. Koontz, a native of Salisbury, N.C., was the first Negro to become president of the National Education Association.

In meetings preceding the address by Mrs. Koontz women from more than 60 state organizations pooled their thinking to define topics that should be of concern to all women. The subjects ranged from birth control to the war in Vietnam.

The commission's recommendations for legislation were presented, and among them were new birth control laws, higher welfare standards and equal women's labor laws.

Women representing such organizations as the Wisconsin Consumer League, NAACP, Urban League of Madison and the YWCA spoke about their organizations' areas of main emphasis.

The five-year-old commission has four major areas of interest, according to the chairman, Dr. Kathryn Clafenbach. They are family law and policy, labor standards, health and welfare and social insurance and taxes. Each of these areas is being investigated by what Dr. Clafenbach termed "experts."

Appleton Woman Heard
"Wisconsin must eliminate its present birth control laws so the women can receive information," said Mrs. Betty Smith, chairman of the Family Law and Policy Task Force. She also recommended that everyone see how juveniles are being detained and urged the establishment of government supported day care centers for working mothers.

Public welfare is designed to limit rather than to eliminate poverty, according to the Health and Welfare Task Force. Mrs. Mabel McClanahan, Appleton, the chairman, called for higher welfare standards, social legislation which would strengthen the family and expansion of educational and training opportunities.

The labor standards report called for elimination in discrimination of labor, removal of hour limitation for working women, time and one half pay and not treating pregnancy as a termination of employment.

Foster Parents Honored at Dinner

JURIE HAUTPLI
Crescent Staff Writer

Social workers should get credit for work done with foster parents; they are the "heart of the program," emphasized Robert Berth when he and his wife, Mrs. Berth, spoke about their experiences at a dinner and honoring foster parents of Outagamie County Thursday evening at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Berth told the majority of the listening in a warm, informal manner, although he readily admitted that his wife did the easier portion of the work with the girls. The Berths became interested in foster child programs through friends in Chicago and their own adoption of a boy. They have had five girls stay with them, ranging in ages from 16 to 22.

Diverse Reactions

There have been two reactions to their helpfulness. Some people commend them for doing a fine thing. Others ask, "How can you bring those girls into your home?" The Berths view the situation as a learning experience for all concerned. The temporary adoption process begins with a talk with the social worker. She has screened the girls to ascertain possible families with which they might be placed. She describes the girl, the prospective foster parents and then brings her along for an interview. This first meeting is usually very general; both parties are afraid of being personal.

After the interview, Mrs. Berth discusses the girl with the social worker, and they decide whether or not the girl should live with the Berths.

When a girl arrives the Berths make no attempt to direct the girl's thinking, and they establish no firm rules. The girl is made to feel at home, and she is expected to help around the house, but not told to. As Berth said, no one likes to be told what to do. It is better to make suggestions and give reasons why a thing should be done.

For the unwed, mothers-to-be foster programs, girls are placed in Appleton homes from the Green Bay Apostolate and vice versa, Mr. Berth explained. The girls are usually out of school and they work out with their social worker when they will return to job or homes. So far, the girls who have stayed with the Berths have chosen to place their children for adoption.

The girls stay with the Berths about 10 days after the birth. One girl was still in school, and she attended classes in Appleton for the remainder of the school year after her baby was born.

During the question and answer part of the program, Mrs. Berth told more about the girls' personal feelings. They stay about four months, so she gets to know them well. They do get depressed, she said, especially the girl whose baby was due within a week of Mrs. Berth's own baby. However these girls usually have made the decision to give up their children before they are placed in foster homes, so that one agonizing settlement has been made. In extremely personal areas such as this one, the Berths rely heavily on the social worker to counsel the girl.

The presence of an adopted child in the foster home makes the decision to give up their babies easier for the girls, both Mr. and Mrs. Berth agreed. They can see, by example, that their child has a chance for a happy home, which they are not able to provide at the time.

The other aspect that especially interested the audience was the effect of the girls on the Berths' eight and 10-year-old sons. The parents assured their listeners there was no adverse influence. The boys adjust easily to new situations, and they take the girls as they are. They were curious when the first girl

Questions were also raised about the emotional attachments the children make with the girls. Berth repeated that the boys adjust easily and added that they know from the beginning that the girls will be with them for a set length of time and then leave.

Family Visits Invited

Mrs. Berth said they encourage each girl's family to visit, and her husband pointed out that they often are embarrassed to come. The parents feel that this unfortunate occurrence marks the whole family, and they are somewhat incredulous that it has happened at all. However, once they have come, the Berths put them at ease and they are more likely to return.

Berth summed up with the important points that these girls are not bad, even though they have got into trouble, and that his family is the first one the girls really get to know outside of their own. It is important for the Berths to set a good example through a natural family atmosphere, so that these girls can see what is involved in a husband-wife-child relationship that they can view objectively. He concluded with the observation, making no interpretations, that each of the five girls that stayed with them have had histories of friction with their fathers.

Agencies and organizations who have helped with the foster child program are the Catholic Apostolate of Appleton, Outagamie County Department of Social Services, Little Women's Circle of The King's Daughters, Lutheran Social Services, Children's Service Society, Outagamie County Hospital, Green Bay Division of Family Service, State Department of Family Service, State Probation Office and State Adult Foster Care.

Refreshments were provided by the George Walter Brewing Co.

Miss Nancy Rickert, dinner chairman; Miss Lynda Lorenz, foster care coordinator for the Outagamie County Department of Social Services; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Berth, guest speakers, and the Rev. Donald Burkart, master of ceremonies, met for a moment at a dinner honoring Outagamie County foster parents Thursday evening at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Your Problems Lucky Streak Runs Out With His Money

Y ANN LANDERS
DEAR ANN LANDERS: A girl I work with is a fantastical, lucky crap shooter. Whenever he has the dice everyone rides her back and cleans up. I've seen her make as many as even passes in a row.

Landers

Two weeks ago Lucky went to Puerto Rico for her vacation. I new she'd be in the casinos very night — and winning, of course — so I gave her $150 to play for me. I made it plain that if she blew it I wouldn't be mad, although I've never known her to lose.

Two days after Lucky left for her vacation, I received a telegram which said, "I hit a lucky streak and lost your money. So sorry." I was really hooked, but figured it was bound to happen eventually.

Yesterday Lucky returned. She was telling the girls in the cafeteria that she had had a great time — won $600 over and above her expenses. When she saw me standing there, she said, "Too bad about your $150. My luck changed right after I lost yours, Honey."

What do you think of a friend like that? — Chicken Inspector

Dear Chick: I think it's worth $150 to find out what kind of a friend she was.

DEAR ANN LANDERS My boyfriend is taking a college summer session in another city. He professes his undying love for me — in writing. His letters are wildly passionate and highly descriptive. I would die if a member of the family opened one by mistake.

In yesterday's letter he admonished me for not responding in equally ardent language. He says my letters are guarded and noncommittal. Now I'm beginning to wonder if he writes those torrid letters for his own erotic pleasure and wishes me to respond in kind for additional stimulation, or if he wants me to put it in writing so he can show his friends? — Big Dolly

Dear Doll: It's entirely possible that your boyfriend gets his jollies from composing red-hot epistles. But he should burn 'em, not mail 'em. Explain that he must not put in writing anything he wouldn't want read aloud to your mother — and that you practice what you preach.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My cousin married three months ago. She is so proud of having snagged a professional man it's revolting. The payoff is this: She introduces herself as Mrs. Dr. Whatchamacallit. The other day when I told her it was not in good taste, she replied, "It saves time. When I say Mrs. Whatchamacallit, people always ask if I'm related to the eye specialist."

Who is right? — Feet First

Dear Feet: You are, of course, but conserve your breath to cool your soup. Lovey. Your cousin is not interested in taste — she's interested only in letting people know she married a doctor.

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope (Copyright, 1969)

VTE-12 Board, Teachers Reach Tentative Accord

Final Announcement on Contract Negotiations to be Made After Ratification by Both Parties

Tentative agreement has been reached between the Vocational, Technical and Adult Education District 12 (VTE-12) board and the teachers in the areas of new machinery and methods. The teachers, however, wanted to know the time period but the board felt that a cutoff period was risky since people need to attend school in the evenings.

Mandatory Credits

—Age limit for mandatory credits. The board felt in the field of education there needed to be a constant updating of the knowledge in the areas of new machinery and methods.

Other issues in dispute up to Monday included contracts running longer than 38 weeks, department chairmen release time, convention times, press releases, dismissal policy, summer school pay and time allotment for lesson preparation.

Talks between the teachers and the board began in December and were declared at an impasse about a month ago. Since then Krinsky has met with the two parties twice.

At the initial meeting he informed the members they could try to resolve the issues through a mediator or go to factfinding which would not only cost the two parties money but would take until November or December to get an opinion.

The structure of the salary schedule, which had been mutually agreed upon in all areas except base pay. The board had been offering $6,800. The teachers had wanted $7,300 base.

—Fringe benefits, including hospital and life insurance. The board had offered to pay 75 per cent. The teachers wanted 100 per cent coverage.

—Class size and work load. The association felt some provisions for this should be made in the master contract. The board felt that as administrators, the district staff should have some fundamental rights in establishing both.

—Work day. Both have agreed

Future Recreation Plans

More Parks Called Urgent City Need

Rapid urbanization has created an urgent need for park and recreation facilities in the city of Appleton and nearby outlying areas, the city plan commission was advised Monday.

Robert Grossman of the St. Louis-headquartered planning firm of Harland Bartholomew and Associates made the observation while giving a preliminary outline of the proposed park-recreation master plan to be completed by August.

The plan will take a look at existing facilities and recommend others needed in the immediate future and those on a long-range basis to meet the central city's needs through 1990.

High points of Grossman's report were that:

Needs Outlined

—Three major community parks are needed, plus development of 60 acres of Langedyke property on the far northside, for park and recreation purposes.

—Additional neighborhood parks are required on the city's heavily populated northside.

—Bellaire Park provides good access to Appleton's limited waterfront and should be developed for maximum use.

—Expansion of Teluska Park on the southside should be undertaken, and Lutz Park maintained for public use and a future marina be operated by the city.

—Plamann Park should be

South of College Avenue

Housing for Elderly Site Considered Near Downtown

The site of Appleton's $3-million high rise apartment building for the elderly may be located south of College Avenue overlooking the central business district.

A special meeting of Knights of Pythias Lodge No. 113 has been called for July 10 to give the membership an opportunity to vote on whether they want to sell the lodge building on Lawrence Street across from the YMCA.

In a letter to all members recently, it was disclosed the board of trustees are recommending the sale of the property to Redevelopment Services, Inc. of Milwaukee for $75,000.

Portion of Site The lodge will be but a portion of the property purchased by the firm which is representing the developer who will be building the city's first 150-unit low income housing structure.

Originally, Morgan School a few blocks north of College Avenue at the fringe of the business district was the No. 1 choice of the Appleton Housing Authority for the high-rise.

But the board of education said it was not available and would not part with the building unless comparable facilities could be assured.

Options Obtained In the meantime, others interested in getting the nod for designing and constructing the federal government-financed housing project obtained options on various properties in and around the central business district.

Most of them are located two and three blocks north of East and West College Avenue.

The housing authority has agreed on a turnkey project by which a developer erects the building, gets paid by the federal government, and then turns it over to the authority to operate.

Elderly residents who qualify can live in the apartments under a low rent payment plan.

One Crane Had to rescue another Monday afternoon after sign-raising operations went awry at new carry-out fried chicken outlet on Foster Street just south of the Appleton City limits in the Town of Menasha. The 70-foot boom on the truck owned by Everbrite Electric Signs, Inc., S. Milwaukee, was fully extended when an outrigger brace near the truck's rear wheels broke and the rig went over on its side. No one was hurt. It took a crane from Hennes Trucking Co., Appleton, to right the tipped crane, while Town of Menasha firemen flushed away spilled gasoline. (Post-Crescent Photo)

School-Park Plan Criticized

A plan for future development, and claimed the planner had followed a previous layout proposed for the area by the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG).

Grossman said he had never seen the COG plan and was not familiar with it.

While Gertsch pushed for the entire 100 acres being designated for future park and recreation use to serve residents of the city, Grossman was contending the proposed school would balance the layout.

The main objection by Gertsch was that the Appleton School District, comprised of the city and three towns, was picking up the best property for school sites and leaving the city with "dogs" for park and recreation purposes.

He questioned whether city taxpayers should be paying the tab for putting in recreation facilities and athletic fields near a proposed future high school for the benefit of town residents.

Opposites Views At one point, Grossman said Appleton as the central city in the area would have to provide such facilities. He claimed they would draw people into the city but Gertsch took the opposite view.

Grossman inferred political boundary lines were no longer the deciding factor and meant little in an area where rapid urbanization was taking place and would continue to do so in the future.

The plan showed the park with a man made lake which could be used as a skating center during the winter time. Other facilities for year-round use were recommended.

Grossman admitted that if the school site was eliminated the park and recreation center could extend from Northland Avenue to Capitol Drive.

Another major objection to the school site, which also includes parking lots and a huge athletic field, was the position by Gertsch that close to half the

Firm Proposed For Fire Study

COG Recommends Consultants for Rescue Program

The Fire and Rescue Service Committee of the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) voted Monday night to recommend the retention of Gage-Babcock, Chicago, an engineering consultant firm, for the proposed study of the fire fighting and rescue facilities of the Fox Cities.

The study to be made is part of COG's program of inventory and analysis of fire and rescue facilities for the Oshkosh to Kaukauna area, and will present a range of alternatives for the council to consider. Increased efficiency of area firefighting and reduced insurance classifications are special study goals.

The decision to recommend Gage-Babcock was made by chairman Roland Kuehn and the committee following interviews with two consultant firms representing the developer who will be building the city's first 150-unit low income housing structure.

Originally, Morgan School a few blocks north of College Avenue at the fringe of the business district was the No. 1 choice of the Appleton Housing Authority for the high-rise.

But the board of education said it was not available and would not part with the building unless comparable facilities could be assured.

Options Obtained In the meantime, others interested in getting the nod for designing and constructing the federal government-financed housing project obtained options on various properties in and around the central business district.

Most of them are located two and three blocks north of East and West College Avenue.

The housing authority has agreed on a turnkey project by which a developer erects the building, gets paid by the federal government, and then turns it over to the authority to operate.

Elderly residents who qualify can live in the apartments under a low rent payment plan.

Froehlich to Chair Council For Two Years

Speaker Elected Head of Legislature's Powerful Study Arm

MADISON — Assembly Speaker Harold Froehlich, R-Appleton, today was elected chairman of the Legislative Council for the coming two years.

The council, the powerful study arm of the legislature, conducts investigations and drafts legislation through citizen-lawmaker committees when the legislature is not in session. It is comprised of the leadership of both parties in each house.

Elected unanimously with Froehlich were State Sen. Walter Hollander, R-Rosendale, vice chairman; and Sen. Leland McParland, D-Cudahy, secretary.

Pending studies for the coming biennium include inheritance tax reforms, public welfare, school districting, imitation foods, legal age restrictions for youths, consumer credit, and automobile accidents and insurance rates.

Mayor Can Tell Big Fish Story Appleton's mayor George Buckley was telling fish stories Monday and enjoying every minute of it.

Buckley caught a 10-pound Northern, measuring close to a yard, at his Post Lake Cottage over the weekend.

"It's the biggest catch I've ever made," commented Buckley, an ardent fisherman.

He was fishing off the cottage pier and trying out a new plug when the whopper hit.

Buckley said a game warden nearby helped him scoop the big fish into a net and has pictures to prove it.

However, there is a problem in the Buckley household. The question has to be resolved whether to eat or mount the prize catch which is presently "on ice."

Park Group Claims Schools Not Available for Recreation

Board of Education Criticized That Facilities Not Open for Use

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Claims were made Monday that buildings and grounds under the jurisdiction of the Appleton Board of Education are not being put to best use when it comes to community-wide recreation programs.

The allegations—made by two representatives of the park-recreation commission—prompted a St. Louis planning consultant to advise members of the city plan commission to "get to the root of the problem."

Robert Grossman, park-recreation planner for Harland Bartholomew and Associates, indicated it was a matter that would have to be resolved before Appleton could implement the master park and recreation plan his firm is preparing for the city through a federal grant.

Grossman was obviously uneasy and did not want to become involved in a power struggle between the district school board and city council. He seemed surprised that some of the conditions alleged with regard to school building use existed.

Program Stymied

Chairman Ralph Gertsch of the Appleton Park-Recreation Commission and Lloyd Koehnke, city recreation director, repeated claims the city's recreation program was being stymied by the difficulty in obtaining the use of school buildings and grounds from the board of education.

Grossman said it was logical that in addition to serving their educational purpose, school buildings in the district should be the center of recreation activities for children as well as adults.

Park Supt. Roger Rindt at one point also told the group he did not think that grounds surrounding some public school buildings were being put to their best use.

It was claimed that near Appleton High School-East where a neighborhood park had been planned, the school board got possession of 12 to 16 acres and intends to use it as a parking lot. Other land in the area is being earmarked by the school board for a driver training layout, it was claimed.

School Board Accused The allegations were that the school board was guilty of "siphoning off" valuable park and recreation sites with no regard for land costs and proper usage.

"When we look for sites for recreation activities there is the constant struggle over who controls them and limitations are placed on my department," Koehnke commented.

Citing the $5 million plus East High layout again, he claimed the gates to the athletic field were padlocked and unavailable for general public use.

"You have many fine school buildings if the facilities cannot and should be used for recreation and other programs," Grossman commented.

"I don't see why the public makes such investments in buildings in the facilities cannot be fully used," he added.

Communication Needed George Narovec, a member of the plan commission, suggested there should be better communication between the school board and city council over such things. He said it was up to those two bodies to settle the jurisdiction question as it affected the park-recreation programs.

Grossman advised that if school buildings were not being used to their fullest recreation advantage, someone should find out why.

He inferred that before any future park recreation plan can be implemented, the matter of public building usage would have to be resolved.

Inspection Team in Appleton Wednesday

The Wisconsin State Patrol motor vehicle inspection team will be in Appleton Wednesday and will conduct voluntary vehicle safety checks at Oneida and Frances Streets from 1 to 3 p.m.

If the waiting line is long, motorists are advised to return on the next voluntary check date. About six minutes are required to check each auto. In event of inclement weather, the inspection will be cancelled.

Youth Found Delinquent in Marijuana Case

Judge Warns Boy Of Seriousness of Possession Charge

With a warning that if he had been an adult he could have faced a long prison sentence, Outagamie County Judge Raymond P. Dohr Monday found a 17-year-old youth delinquent in connection with a charge of possessing marijuana.

Dohr placed the youth under the custody of the Outagamie County Department of Social Services until he is 18 years old.

"If that doesn't work out, there will be no alternative but to take you from your home," Dohr warned the Appleton youth.

Dohr told a county welfare caseworker that with closer supervision the boy probably "could be straightened out."

The youth has been under supervision of the county agency since last August, when he appeared in Dohr's court on a burglary charge brought by Appleton police. A delinquency finding was withheld at that time.

Caught at School An Appleton detective told the court Monday that the youth was caught in a hallway at Appleton High School-West with a small bag of marijuana he later told police he purchased for $7.50. School officials called police on April 30.

The boy told detectives he smoked some of the marijuana, at High Cliff State Park and at his home. He said he had never used any other drugs.

The court was told that the youth flunked three high school subjects last term and that he was absent from school 28 days.

A 16-year-old Appleton boy who sold the 17-year-old marijuana was found delinquent earlier this month and was placed under one year's supervision to the county welfare agency.

Town of Menasha Decides To Stay in Fox Valley COG

MENASHA — The Town of Menasha will spend at least another year as a paying member of the Fox Valley Council of Governments.

The board Monday evening went along with a 90-day extension requested by the special town committee appointed to weigh the value of COG membership. By extending the final report date three months, the three-man board assured that the town would take part in the next COG budget year, which starts July 1.

More Study

The special committee, formed April 28 to come up with a recommendation on the town's future role in COG, asked the board for another 90 days "to more fully investigate the entire situation as it pertains to the Town of Menasha."

But, at the same time, it threw its support behind structured planning, continued participation in COG and the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission and the creation of a town planning unit.

'Only Direction'

The committee felt that the recommendations "point to the only direction the Town of Menasha can proceed at this time."

The five-man citizens group, headed by Harry Lopas, noted the upcoming Federal Standard Municipal Statistical Area, to be created by the next census, could have an effect on requirements for state and federal aid programs.

Federal Aid

The report noted that "no facts can be found to show that the Town of Menasha will, or will not, lose its ability to gain federal monies by discontinuing its membership in the Council of Governments."

However, it added the committee "is also of the opinion that great difficulties may come to the Town of Menasha concerning federal and state monies if COG membership is discontinued now, and, in the next year or two, COG membership would be required for such monies."

The committee, which had received an offer from the NWRPC to handle all town planning, also recommended support of that regional planning commission.

A five-man town planning commission, as urged by the special committee, would make use of the NWRPC planning services on either a contract or an hourly basis.

'Impractical to Ignore'

The town is indirectly connected with the NWRPC through Winnebago County's membership. Thus, the group felt "it would be impractical to ignore the benefits which may be gained through the NWRPC."

The town board, reluctant to endorse the committee's preliminary recommendations, including the town's own planning unit, gave the committee another 90 days to bolster its findings.

Consolidation Urged For Area Plan Groups

MENASHA — A single regional planning unit to oversee both urban and rural planning in northeastern Wisconsin was proposed Monday by the chairman of Town of Menasha's special planning committee.

Harry Lopas, in delivering the preliminary recommendations of his group on the value of town membership in the Fox Valley Council of Governments, added a note of his own when he urged the consolidation of COG and the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission.

He claimed the area had "two great planning commissions" and added, "If we can combine them, then we can start planning for the people."

The committee had urged continued support of both

COG and NWRPC, including buying some planning services from the latter agency.

The report stressed that "communication and cooperation channels" between COG and NWRPC should "be widened and expanded."

Widening Gulf

The committee noted the area had two planning agencies and added that "any widening of the gulf developing between the two agencies can only work to the disadvantage of the area as a whole at this time."

Admitting the town board hadn't asked them to delve into this area, the committee added that "cooperative efforts on the part of both agencies can only better the area and the individual agencies' work."

Second Feeder Lines Started In Power Link

MENASHA — Work will begin this week, according to the Menasha Water & Light Utility, to put up the second feeder line linking the steam generator plant and the interconnection substation near the city garage.

The line will follow a route along Second Street east from Tayco to Konemac Street, north along Konemac to Third Street, east to the extension of Melissa Street and then north to the substation near the city garage.

The lines connecting Menasha and Kaukauna electric utilities will follow the Milwaukee Road Railway right-of-way from the Melissa Street substation part of the way to Kaukauna, then follow private and highway easements.

The first of the two feeder lines from the generator plant to the substation largely has been installed, following a separate route along Third Street and Plank Road.

According to James Taylor, Menasha utility manager, a new pole line on Second Street will be put up for the feeder, and some existing wires will be transferred to the new poles to "clean up" the appearance of the overhead lines.

Power Company, Workers to Talk

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Negotiations between the Wisconsin Electric Power Co. and striking members of Local 2150 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers will resume Wednesday, it was announced.

The meeting, called by federal mediator Eugene Mylneck, will be the first since the 1,100 maintenance and construction workers walked off their jobs in 15 Southeastern Wisconsin counties last week.

Besides improvements in wages and fringe benefits, the union is asking a voice in formation of safety and work rules.

Neenah Calls For Lighting Cutback

NEENAH — The city's overall street lighting program was set back Monday as the street and sanitation committee again debated the need for mercury vapor lighting and for lighting on Lakeshore Drive.

Unwilling to make a final decision, the committee instead decided to have Public Works Director Wayne Bryan check into the feasibility of installing only some of the lights, leaving open the possibility that more could be added later if desired.

Replace Lights

The committee felt it wanted mercury vapor lamps installed only in replacement of 154 present incandescent lamps after Ald. Michael Ellis questioned the need for installing about 410 mercury vapor lamps, as had originally been proposed.

"I don't in my own judgment, believe we need mercury vapor lighting throughout the whole city," Ellis said.

Lighting should be based on two needs — crime ratio and traffic hazards, Ellis said. The only crime problem in the area involved in the relighting is vandalism at schools and the major traffic hazards are at intersections, he added.

Bryan, however, indicated that 410 mercury vapor lamps had been planned to replace 154 incandescent lights in order to bring the city up to standards, based on traffic volume, set by the Illuminating Engineers Society.

A mercury vapor light of the size planned will provide three to five times as much illumination as one of the incandescent lamps now in use, Bryan said. If 410 mercury vapor lights were installed, they would be only about half as far apart as the present incandescents, further increasing illumination, he added.

Ellis, however, wondered if the Illuminating Engineers standards were really applicable to Neenah, and suggested instead that mercury vapor lights be installed at intersections and schools and that incandescents remain in mid-block areas.

Lakeshore Drive

In asking the need for mercury vapor lights, Ellis also questioned the need for mercury vapor lighting on Lakeshore Drive, which has been strongly opposed by the area's residents.

But aldermen were reluctant to grant exemption of one area from the relighting, fearing that other property owners would also ask to be exempted, and no action was taken.

The original relighting plan, part of a partially-completed program to relight the whole city, was to install the 410 mercury vapor lamps in an area north of Cecil and east of Commercial Street and along Cecil to U.S. 41.

The relighting, to cost some $18,000, was due to begin in July and be completed by October, but now the dates are up in the air, according to Bryan.

Earlier, the relighting had been delayed because of disagreement over the proposal to include Lakeshore Drive in the program.

NM Workers Earn $154 Per Week

NEENAH — Average weekly earnings of Twin Cities manufacturing employees during May were $154.78, down $9.44 from the April average of $155.72, according to statistics by the Wisconsin Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations.

The weekly earnings fell despite an increase in the average hourly wage from $3.46 in April to $3.48 in May due to a decrease in the average weekly hours from 45.0 in April to 44.4 in May.

The average weekly wage of Twin Cities workers was the second highest in the state, substantially above the average for all Wisconsin workers of $139.22. However all Wisconsin manufacturing employees averaged only 41.3 hours a week, compared with 44.4 for Twin Cities workers.

Average weekly earnings in May, 1968 were $145.30 and average hourly earnings in May 1968 were $3.22, for Twin Cities workers.

pay the cost of the study, which would include traffic counts, engineering data on sizes and design of streets and other technical matter.

Haas said the street and sanitation committee and other local bodies including the common council all must give approval before the city enters the program. The street and sanitation committee recently voted to gather local population growth forecasts, land use plans and related information which is also needed for the application.

Funds Shortage

Haas said two considerations stand in the way of starting preparations to apply for the program. One is manpower, which Haas said is in short supply at present due to other pressing engineering needs in the city.

The other is funds. If the city decides to press for the aid, it will have to provide its share of the cost of the improvements, and also will have to bear the cost of the initial study required to apply.

The grant program will not

Wadleigh Resigns Post In Winneconne District

WINNECONNE — V. J. Wadleigh, superintendent of schools in the Winneconne School District, submitted his resignation Monday night to the board of education.

Wadleigh, superintendent for three years, said this morning the resignation, effective July 31, was due to "professional advancement."

He will take over as superintendent of the Clintonville school district Aug. 1, succeeding Kenneth Rawson, superintendent for the past 24 years.

Seek Replacement

Board members will hold a special meeting next Monday night to determine the replacement procedure for Wadleigh. The superintendent said he would help out in the Winneconne School District for the next couple months.

Board commissioners first knew of the impending resignation on June 14, according to Wadleigh.

A native of Beaver Dam, Wadleigh attended public schools in that area. He was graduated from Eau Claire State College in 1966 with a bachelor of science degree. He did additional graduate work at the University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin, where he received his master's degree in 1962.

Principal's Role

He served as Winneconne High School principal for five years before assuming the role of superintendent.

His past three years as superintendent have been marked mainly by the fight of the school district to get community support or a new high school. The project has been twice-defeated in referendums.

Plan for Langedyke Property Criticized

100 acres would be under the jurisdiction of the school district and not the city.

Critical of Schools

Earlier, Gertsch and other representatives of the park-recreation department had been critical of the school board's policy toward public use of buildings and other facilities for general recreation purposes.

Pointing to an acute shortage of baseball diamonds and play fields in Appleton, Gertsch contended half of the Langedyke property should be for recreation and the other half a community center park.

Grossman hastened to interject there was no such thing as separating parks and recreation.

On another note Gertsch, a former alderman, charged that past history showed the city was losing too much property to school facilities.

"We purchase property for future park sites, and in some instances spend thousands of dollars to fill in swamp holes, only to turn them over to the district school board," Gertsch complained.

School Costs

Appleton pays more than 80 per cent of the school district operation costs and the three attached towns the rest.

Grossman said he felt the plan was not supposed to portray one system or division of local government against the other and reiterated, "I would say the 40 acres make a perfect school site."

The possibility of forming some kind of a joint commission of school district and park-recreation commission representatives to establish a larger park district (taking in the school district — not just the city) was suggested by Grossman.

The plan commission was told the finalized recommendation for development of the 100 acres would be available in August.

Waupaca Man Joins County Traffic Patrol

John Kluender to Take Over Duties in Clintonville Area

WAUPACA — John C. Kluender, 25, route 2, Waupaca is the newest member of the Waupaca County Traffic Patrol.

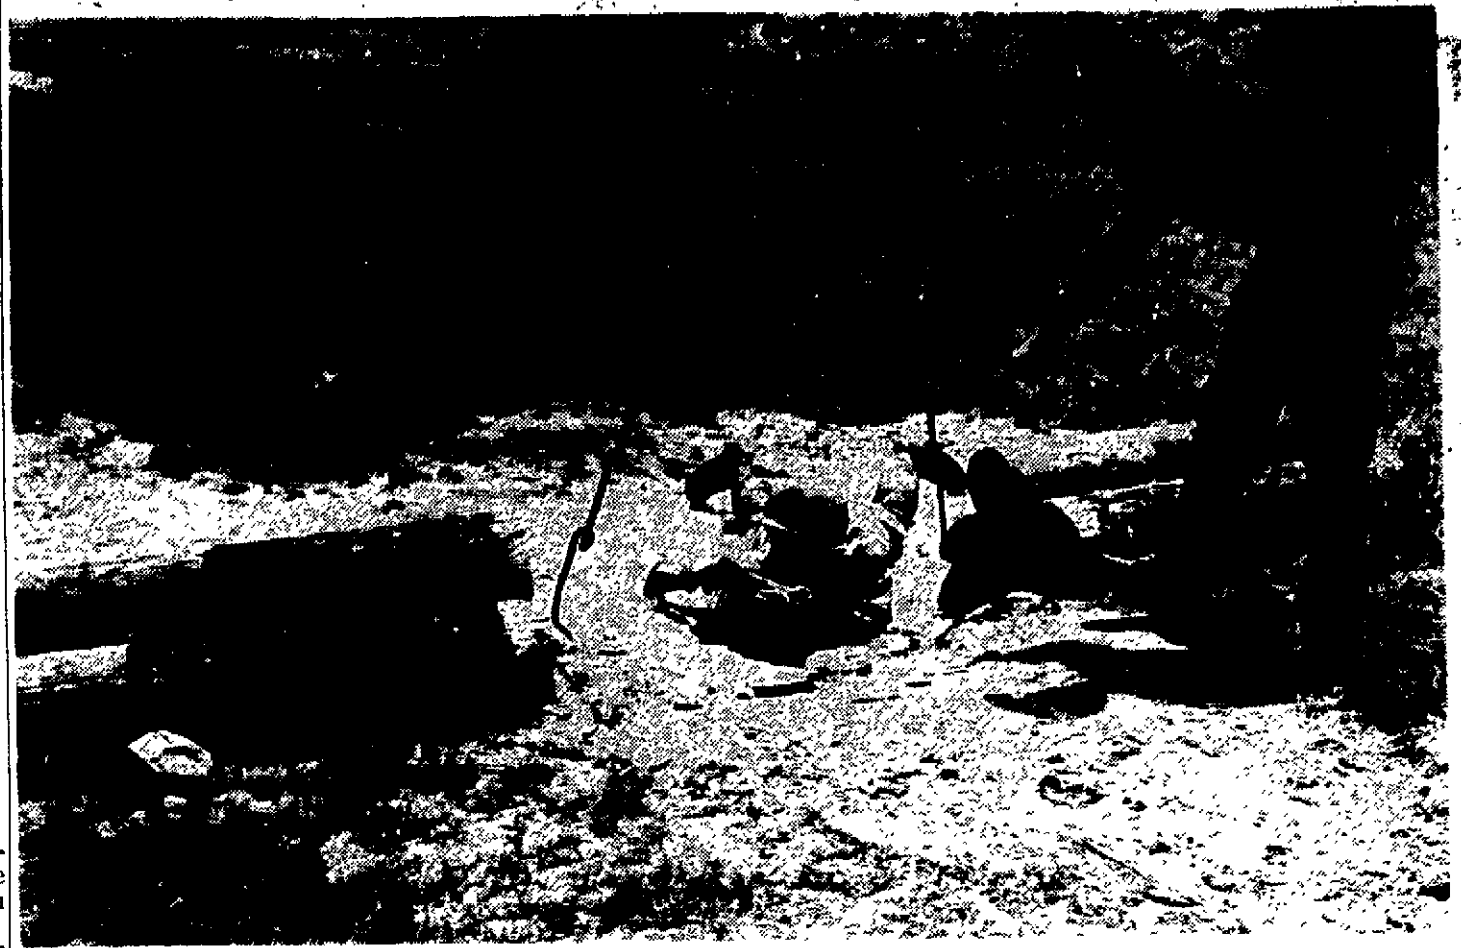

Captain John Penney said today that Kluender had accepted the post which became vacant when Bernard Pipkorn, veteran traffic patrolman, was named chief deputy and second command in the sheriff's department.

Kluender has been a conservation patrolman for the past five years. He is a graduate of Waupaca High School and is single.

When he assumes his duties on July 1, Penney explained, he will be assigned to the Clintonville area, formerly covered by Pipkorn.

The complement of county traffic department will be seven.

Noting that federal funds are available through the Open Space program to develop park and recreation areas, Grossman said he would assist the city in making grant applications.

It also was recalled that in the early 1960's the St. Louis firm prepared an extensive plan for the development of Bellaire Park, but the work had not been carried out.

"To my knowledge, it has never gone anywhere," Grossman said of the detailed plan which cost the park board several thousand dollars and was approved by the city council for implementation.

Market Holds Early Gains

Technical Rally Gets Credit for Active Advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market held onto most of its early gains in fairly active trading early this afternoon, with brokers crediting a technical rally for the advance.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 6.47 at 877.33. The Dow had been ahead 7.82 at 10:30 a.m.

Gains led losses by better than 600 issues.

The early advance, analysts said, was a continuation of the bargain hunting which got under way late Monday and enabled the market to cut some of its early sharp losses although it still closed the day with a loss.

Higher Tone

One upward drive, they said, "primarily is a technical rebound."

Conglomerates mostly had a higher tone, although Ling-Temco-Vought was off 1 at 41½.

Steels, electronics and utilities mostly were fractionally higher. Motors also were advancing, with General Motors up 1.

Seventeen of the 20 most-active issues on the New York Stock Exchange advanced, and 3 declined.

Northwest Industries, most active largely on a 105,500-share block, was off 1 at 21½.

Prices generally were higher on the American Stock Exchange.

Burning Paper Brings 5 Fire Units to School

Paper burning in an incinerator triggered an alarm that brought five units of the Appleton Fire Department to Einstein Junior High School about 8:45 a.m. today.

Smoke from the incinerator had backed up, activating the school's fire alert system.

At 4:20 p.m. Monday, firefighters were summoned to the Dwane Seidl home, 526 W. Verbrick St., when a wash machine motor overheated.

Tornadoes.

Only one instrument can positively identify them — the human eye. Use yours.

When your area receives a tornado watch, watch.

Watch for the deadly funnel that twists down from the thundercloud.

Listen for its roar. If you see it or hear it — and if there is time — report it immediately to your nearest Weather Bureau or public safety office.

When your area receives a tornado warning, one has been seen. Your life may be at stake.

Take cover below ground level or in a strong building. Open a few windows, but stay away from glass. Curl up. Shield your head. If you are caught outdoors, lie flat in the nearest depression.

And move quickly. Seconds save lives.

Council of Churches Agrees To Discuss Black Demands

National Group Says Christians Have Obligation to Hear Claims

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Council of Churches has agreed to consult with the National Black Economic Development Conference on the conference's reparations demands.

The executive committee of the council, which includes all major Protestant and Orthodox denominations, said Monday that Christians are obligated to listen to claims for $500 million in reparations for injustices to black people.

But listening "is not enough," their statement said. "There must be penitence and a readiness to make recompense." The council said it would set up a special committee to negotiate with the conference and recommend programs.

New "Sleep + Aspirin" tablets help you pop right off to Sound Safe Sleep

(Special)...A New York chemist has perfected a remarkable "Asper-Sleep" formula which unites in one small tablet 3 safe aids to sound, refreshing sleep. No other sleeping tablets offer more comfort...yet are not habit-forming!

Never before has there been such a combination to help you relieve the problem of sleeplessness — to bring restful sleep without habit-forming drugs. No prescription is needed — just ask for "Asper-Sleep Tablets". For 100% safe sleep take as directed.

The reason you can fall asleep so fast and sleep like a log is that each Asper-Sleep tablet contains (shown in ingredients):

(1) An anti-anxiety which (in test by doctors) proved an effective as a usual dose of phenobarbital...yet Asper-Sleep is safe, safe.

(2) A sedative with gentle soothing properties — to help you relax from simple everyday nervous tensions.

(3) Last but not least, Asper-Sleep contains analgesic, pain-relieving aspirin. This curbs the minor aches of common headaches, colds and minor arthritis, rheumatism, muscular and menstrual aches and pains — to help you sleep when these disturbances are keeping you awake.

So get your sleep tonight without the depressing after-effects of habit-forming drugs. Asper-Sleep contains no barbiturates. You pop off to sleep, wake up "bright-eyed and bushy-tailed" not dull or dozy. During the night you are relaxed yet responsive to emergency.

Asper-Sleep brings you better, deeper sleep than any sleeping tablet you have ever taken... returns the purity and health and get all the benefits of a good night's sleep. Sleep-tablet advertisement, etc.

The committee's vote on the resolution was 17 to 1, with two abstentions.

New French Ministers Take Office

PARIS (AP) — Jacques Chaban-Delmas took over as French premier today from Maurice Couve de Murville and new ministers assumed power in almost all the other ministries.

Only three ministers from Couve de Murville's Cabinet were held over by Chaban-Delmas.

The premier appears before the National Assembly this afternoon to attend the steering committee session that outlines the work of Parliament. The Cabinet will meet Wednesday with President Georges Pompidou for the first time.

On Thursday, Chaban-Delmas will be back at the National Assembly to make his first policy address.

Pompidou also will send a message to Parliament, to be read in the National Assembly by Chaban-Delmas and in the Senate by Justice Minister Rene Pleven. The statements by Pompidou and Chaban-Delmas are expected to set the tone for the new regime's actions.

Political groups meet in the National Assembly today to decide how to vote in Wednesday's election of a new assembly president. Chaban-Delmas, president of the assembly since 1959, resigned after he was appointed premier.

Achille Peretti, mayor of suburban Neuilly and first vice president of the assembly, is expected to be elected as his successor.

Shippers Oppose Conservationists

Deepening Mississippi River Debated

LA CROSSE (AP) — To those Missouri rivers join forces.

It's still a big river, bigger than any other in Wisconsin, but it's a pretty river. It has carved a canyon 600 feet deep and up to five miles wide through the bedrock leaving high, wooded bluffs over looking its waters on both the Wisconsin and Minnesota sides as testimonials to its sheer power.

Part of Trouble
It's partly that power is causing the trouble. Throughout its millions of years of existence, the river has been cutting grains of sand off the riverbed.

The sand ground more sand from the banks down river. Finally the river dumped the sand, forming the delta at New Orleans.

Then man stepped in. The Mississippi was so shallow, early steamboats sometimes got caught and had to tie up and just wait until a heavy rain brought enough water to float their boats.

Just after the Civil War, a long range program of improving the river began. Wing dams of rocks and logs were built to collect the sand, partially dam the river, and force its rushing current into channels.

The force of the river current scoured out the channels and barges and boats could navigate any time the river wasn't frozen.

The wing dams did their job well. From the time they were built in the 1870s and 1880s, they kept clear a six foot channel from St. Paul, Minn. to Cairo, Ill.

Haunts for Walleye
And, the wing dams made fantastic haunts for walleye.

But progress crept up on the river with newer and larger riverboats. The nine foot channel was the product of depression fighting public works efforts of the 1930s. It was built by constructing a series of 27 dams and locks—turning the river into a series of lakes to help navigation and control flooding.

The higher water flooded some wildlife marshes and created others. It also created a new network of ever changing subchannels.

The sands of the old river once carried off to the Gulf of Mexico now settle in the pools. An Army Engineers dredge, The Markham, slowly puffs up and down the river, sucking sand off the channel bottom and piling it to one side.

Conservationists say the engineers have gone too far. They say the river's historic process of cutting deeper into the rock has been reversed and it is now raising its bed. The engineers disagree.

Meanwhile, shippers and boat operators call for a still deeper channel. The channel could be deepened either by more dredging or building higher dams to raise the water level.

Congress has been listening to the idea for 25 years, ordering the first of several studies in 1944.

Conservationists are appalled. They say raising the water level would flood most of the small islands that dot the river and provide havens for wildlife.

They also say it would give wind driven waves more room to build up size and power and increase erosion damage.

Deepening the channel, they say, would speed up the buildup of dredged soil along the channel.

The controversy has brought many traditional and bitter enemies together to oppose deepening the channel. These include railroads and truck lines, river-side property owners and speedboat operators: each opposing the plan for his own reasons.

Opponents of the plan talk about a small island near La Moille, Minn., which has been moving steadily southward since the Dresbach Dam was built in 1937. Sand is worn away from the north end of the island and new land is piled up at the south end.

The 12 foot channel would cause many more wandering islands, its opponents say.

The engineers are due to report to Congress by 1971. Opponents of the 12-foot channel are convinced the Army will recommend it, and are stockpiling ammunition for a long fight.

A major attack will be in the area of cost, which so far has not been estimated or announced publicly.

One critic said it would run up to $250 million.

Congress is sure to have that part of the question pointed out when it acts on the engineers' report.

Senate Investigators Summon Police to Violence Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators called for more police testimony on the Black Panthers party and the Students for a Democratic Society as hearings resumed today into urban and campus violence.

The Senate permanent investigations subcommittee, reopening its violence hearings after a three-day break, summoned police from San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The subcommittee's staff of investigators also prepared a new chart of the SDS structure for unveiling at the hearing.

In sessions last week the subcommittee displayed two huge charts of the SDS and Black Panther leadership.

Earlier police witnesses testified the SDS was dominated by admitted Communists and that the Black Panther Party had plotted terrorist acts and armed revolution against the nation's government.

Police Report Actress Didn't Take Overdose

Autopsy Awaited To Determine How Judy Garland Died

LONDON (AP) — Reports speculating that Judy Garland may have died from an overdose of sleeping pills are "pure rubbish," a Scotland Yard spokesman says. A coroner has ordered an inquest Wednesday into the death of the 47-year-old star.

Police said Monday there were a number of pills in the singer's home when Miss Garland was found dead in her bathroom Sunday. The pills were nowhere near the body but have been taken to Scotland Yard for examination, officers said.

Police doctors performed an autopsy Monday but did not disclose the results.

Wait for Autopsy
"As of this moment nobody in the Yard knows what she died from, nor will we until we know the results of the autopsy," a police spokesman said.

Doctors said following the autopsy they were taking some of Miss Garland's organs to a Scotland Yard laboratory for further examination. The organs were not identified.

She had cirrhosis of the liver and had been told by a London surgeon that she was "living on borrowed time."

The physician, Dr. Phillip Lebon, said he and another doctor had examined Miss Garland eight years ago and estimated then she had no more than five years to live.

"Read Riot Act"
Lebon said he had "read the riot act" to Miss Garland and had warned her not to drink.

She was known as a heavy drinker and for years had consumed many kinds of pills.

One of Miss Garland's representatives said the funeral probably would be held Friday in New York "if all the formalities are completed in time."

The spokesman said the singer's husband, Mickey Deans, would fly to New York with the body. Her three children, entertainer Liza Minnelli and teenagers Lorna and Joey Luft, are in the United States.

Opening lead — ♣ K

When today's hand was played in the 1966 world championships, West opened the king of clubs. Toronto expert Sammy Kehela refused the first trick, and West shifted to the queen of spades.

Kehela took the ace of spades, led a trump to the king, cashed the ace of clubs, got to his hand with the ace of trumps and ruffed his last club. With the clubs and trumps thus stripped, he gave up the lead with a spade.

West stepped up with the jack of spades and led the six of diamonds. East played the ten on dummy's low card, and Kehela had to decide which defender had the king of diamonds. If West had the king, declarer should take the ace of diamonds and lead toward dummy's queen; but if East had the king of diamonds, South should allow the ten of diamonds to hold the trick.

Reviews Play

Kehela knew that West had started with only one heart, some clubs headed by the K-Q and some spades headed by the Q-J. If West also held the king of diamonds he would have doubled or overcalled after South's opening bid of one heart. Since West had actually passed, it was virtually impossible for him to have the king of diamonds.

Acting on this reasoning, Kehela allowed East to win the first diamond trick with the ten. Now if East returned a spade or

Fast Talker Gives Women Total Clip Job

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Several Charleston area women are being clipped—literally bald—by a man who cons them out of their hair instead of their money.

Police said the man usually offers a hair-styling that turns into a total clip job. There are six confirmed cases in the past four years, but detectives say many more women may be involved and are too embarrassed to call police.

The man operates with his scissors and razor just outside the reach of the law. If women give him consent to work on their hair, police say, the man can't be charged with assault.

Police files show the man frequently talks women in a door-to-door campaign that he is opening a new beauty salon. He offers the lady of the house a sampling of his work. Those who agree have found up hold. Detectives say the man does this as a form of sexual perversion. But none of the women to date have been harmed beyond damaged dignity.

Eyes Jimmy Ellis as Next Foe

Frazier Scores TKO in 7th

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Minutes after Joe Frazier had destroyed game, half-blinded Jerry Quarry in seven rounds of an impressive title defense, the unbeaten Philadelphia and WBA champion Jimmy Ellis challenged each other in the Madison Square Garden ring.

It looked like a fight natural in the making for the disputed crown in September between Frazier, the six-state king of the heavyweights, and Ellis, the World Boxing Association's champion from Louisville, Ky.

But Ellis may take on former champion Sonny Liston first in Los Angeles, Houston, or Las Vegas in late June or early July.

Verbal Battle

Frazier and Ellis had their verbal battle shortly after the ring physician, Dr. Harry Kleiman, had come to Quarry's rescue and ordered the one-sided fight stopped after the seventh round. In New York it was listed as a seventh-round technical knockout.

Quarry, who had come tearing out in the first round like a hungry tiger after a lamb, was cut and puffed under the right eye in the third round. Unable to see from the eye, he absorbed a fearsome beating to the head and body from then on although he never was dropped.

Came to Fight

"He is a helluva fighter," said Quarry, stopped for the first time in his career (31-3-4). "I couldn't see out of my right eye. I didn't want the fight to be stopped. I wanted to go out punching like a man."

"He was tough but I knew I would get him," said Frazier. "He came to fight."

Frazier's relentless, buzz-saw attack impressed most everyone in the crowd of 16,570 (gross gate $502,518) but it didn't scare Ellis.

Called into the ring for a television interview, he soon was engaged in a shouting battle with Frazier, who still had plenty of fire left.

"He kept hollering, I'm next, and pointed his finger at me," said Ellis. "I told him I would beat him and shut his mouth. I want that man."

Frazier said he told Ellis "You're no champ. You won't fight anybody. A champ's got to fight everybody."

Turns Him Loose

Yank Durham, Frazier's manager and trainer, told Ellis, "We're going to take a tune-up with you and then fight Cassius Clay if the government ever turns him loose. But right now Joe's going to rest. He's had four title defenses in a year."

"We'll sign the papers right now," said Angelo Dundee, Ellis' manager, "but they're ducking us. That Yank Durham just likes to talk a lot of baloney. We want Frazier. But we're not going to wait forever."

Although Ellis has more territory to reign over, the aggressive, Frazier is the hottest guy in boxing right now.

The 25-year-old muscleman's devastating destruction of the 24-year-old blond from Bellflower, Calif., was his 24th in as many pro fights and his 22nd knockout. His knockout average of .875 is second only among all heavyweight champions to retired, undefeated Rocky Marciano's .878.

Wears Down Foes

Frazier wears down his opponents like those big iron balls knock down buildings. He is as persistent as a dentist's drill. He keeps coming and punching as if he was afraid he'd be fined for loitering.

Quarry knew he'd come and predicted that he'd knock out Joe in five. The ruggedly handsome blond tried to do it in one. He surprised the fans, but not Frazier, by rushing to the attack in a sensational and savage first round.

They stood toe-to-toe and hammered each other to the body and head with thudding left hooks. Quarry's right chops to the head provided the difference in the round—the only one Jerry won.

Cubs Edge Pittsburgh

Wills, Manny Mota

Lead Dodgers' 5-3

Win Over Braves

BY DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
MAURY WILLS is the quarter-back who makes the Los Angeles Dodgers go-go-go... but Manny Mota is the No. 1 ground-gainer in their rebuilt attack.

Mota, acquired with Wills from Montreal two weeks ago, drove in three runs Monday night with a single and his first 1969 homer, leading the Dodgers past Atlanta 5-3 for their seventh straight victory.

Wills contributed a single and triple as the Dodgers pushed their National League West Division lead to 1½ games over the second place Braves. With the two veterans batting 1-2 in the line-up, they have won nine of 13 starts in their charge to first place.

Elsewhere, the Chicago Cubs struck for two runs in the ninth inning and edged Pittsburgh 5-4 for a five-game East Division lead over idle New York; Cincinnati blanked staggering San Diego 5-0 on Jim Merritt's two-hitter and Houston ran its winning streak to seven with a 9-3 victory over San Francisco. St. Louis and Montreal were rained out in the only other game on the NL schedule.

Different Air

"The first time Maury Wills walked into our dressing room there was a different air in the clubhouse," pitcher Don Sutton said after beating the Braves for an 11-5 season record with relief help from Jim Brewer.

In the second, Frazier took the lead and held it the rest of the way. He kept driving Quarry to the ropes. Late in the second round jolting Joe hurt his man with a left hook to the jaw.

Late in the third he chopped open the inch-wide gash that required eight stitches. At the end of the fourth Dr. Kleiman examined Quarry. And in the sixth Jerry won.

Jerry's knees buckled from the smashing blows.

The finish was inevitable. Quarry was fighting with his right hand high to protect his wound. He was dead game but the steam had been taken out of his punches by crunching body blows.

Quarry, at 198½, was a few pounds heavier than expected. Frazier weighed 203½, and was a 2-1 favorite at fight time.

With the closed circuit television and other receipts included, Frazier earned about $350,000 and Quarry around $250,000.

Foreman Winner

George Foreman, the 1968 Olympic heavyweight champ, made his pro debut by knocking out Don Waldhelm of Freeport, N.Y. in 1:54 of the third round of a scheduled six-round match just before the main go.

Foreman, 219, who had a 32-pound edge on Waldhelm, 187, was booed as he bowed to ring-siders, international style, after the fight that ended with Waldhelm on his knees.

Foreman is the boxer who waved the American flag at the Mexico Olympics. The 20-year-old boxer from Hayward, Calif. had no trouble with his angular foe.

Mike Quarry, 18-year-old high school grad from Bellflower, Calif., got the Quarry family off on the right foot with a majority decision over Ruben Figueroa of New York in another six-round prelim. Quarry weighed 171½, Figueroa 170. There were no knockdowns in the free-swinging brawl.

Mota, a 31-year-old outfielder who accompanied Wills from Pittsburgh to Montreal in the expansion draft, has been even hotter at the plate since becoming a Dodger. He has hit at a .425 clip, boosting his season average to .353, and has failed to connect in only one of 12 starts with Los Angeles.

Carty Homers

The Braves tied Monday night's game 2-2 in the sixth on Rico Carty's homer after Mota sent the Dodgers ahead with a two-run blast off George Stone in the third.

Stone balked home the go-ahead run in the seventh and the Dodgers added two more in the ninth on Wills' triple. Mota's single, a sacrifice bunt and catcher Bob Tullman's two-base throwing error.

Trailing 4-3 in the ninth, the Cubs swept past Pittsburgh on a pinch single by Bill Heath, a bunt single by Don Kessinger.

Foxes Stay in Race With Two Extra-Inning Victories

Sweep Keeps Appleton One-Half Game Out of Lead; O'Toole And Benko Gain Pitching Wins

BY TIM PETERMANN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

With the pressure really bearing down on them, the Appleton Foxes swept a pair of "must" games from Cedar Rapids at Goodland Field Monday night—but the Foxes had to go eight innings to nip the dogged Cardinals, 2-1, in the opener and then battled the visitors for 12 innings before scoring a 4-3 win in the nightcap. (Both games were scheduled for seven innings).

When the Foxes took the field at the start of the twin bill, it marked the first time this season they played without the label "Midwest League Leaders." They had dropped eight of their last nine contests (all but the first one on the road) and trailed Quincy and Quad Cities by a half game with less than a week remaining in the first-half pennant chase. So they could not afford to lose.

Appleton and Cedar Rapids will tangle again at 7:30 p.m. today at Goodland Field. The runnerup Foxes still trail Quincy, which also won a doubleheader, by a half game.

The return to Goodland Field, after an 8-game road trip, proved to be a good tonic for the Foxes. With the double victory, the Foxes have now won 19 of 22 games at home, compared to a 13-16 record on the road. The doubleheader sweep was the fifth straight at home and their 1-run victory record jumped to 8-1 compared to a 2-10 mark in 1-run decisions on the road.

Although the Foxes lacked their usual hitting punch (only six hits in the first game and eight in the second), the Foxes infield played almost flawlessly for the 20 innings (one error which did no harm) and came up with at least a half dozen spectacular plays.

Only about 200 fans of the 743 attendance were still around at 12:21 a.m. today when the Foxes pushed across the winning run in the 12th inning of the second game.

In both games, the Foxes tallied the winning run after two were out in the inning.

With two out in the 12th, the Cards' Almonte Gonzales walked Marty Morrison. Greg Howell slammed a hard single to right and Stu Singleton drew a walk to load the bases.

Gonzalez then threw four straight balls to Roger Benko, his mound opponent at the time, to force in the winning run and give Benko the win.

The Cardinals had forced an extra-inning contest when they scored two runs in the seventh inning to counter the two the Foxes had tallied in the bottom of the previous inning. The 3-1 lead the Foxes held for less than half an inning was the biggest difference between the two teams in the entire 20 innings.

The visitors scored their two runs after two were out. Back-to-back singles by Fred Groons and Andy Ondesko plated Mel Pettigrew who had singled leading off and Ron Kinney who was running for Terry Milani who had been hit by a pitch.

In the sixth, George Hunter tripled in Sam Bowen who had beaten out a high chopper to third. Hunter came home standing.

Quincy Takes Over Lead in Hot ML Race

Quad Cities Falls To Third Place After Twin-Bill Split

Quincy took over the lead, as Quad Cities fell from first to third place in the red-hot Midwest League baseball race Monday night.

Quincy, which had trailed Quad Cities by a few percentage points before the star "doubleheader night" in the ML, downed Decatur, 4-2 and 3-0. Quad Cities, lost to Burlington, 2-1, before scoring a 6-2 nightcap win.

Fourth place Clinton also lost ground as it was held even by Waterloo. The Hawks won the opener, 5-2, but the Pilots came back for a 10-1 victory.

Appleton moved up from third to second place with a pair of extra-inning wins over Cedar Rapids.

Quincy and Quad Cities both have six games left in the first round, while Clinton has five and Appleton only three.

Orioles Trim Senators

Smith Gambles; Tigers Beat Yanks, 6-5

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

It might have looked like a big gamble, but Mayo Smith's parlay of Cash and Price paid off for the Detroit Tigers.

That's Norm Cash and Jim Price, and they were heavily responsible for the Tigers' 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees. Most responsible, however, might have been Smith himself.

It was the manager's maneuver that actually brought the Tigers the victory on a night when rain interfered with much of the schedule.

In the American League, rain washed out Cleveland at Boston and Chicago at Seattle, leaving Baltimore to trim Washington 5-3 and California to top Minnesota 5-2.

Of the Tigers' first four runs, Cash figured in all of them. In the first inning, his single sent Dick McAuliffe to third from where he scored on Willie Horton's single.

Long Rfly
In the third, Cash drove a fly to deep center, enabling Tom Tresh to go to third from where he came home on San Bahnen's wild pitch.

In the fifth, Cash singled home Al Kaline, and in the seventh, his single moved Kaline to third from where he scored on another Horton single.

Still, the Tigers trailed 5-4 going into the ninth. Left-hander Steve Hamilton got the first out, but Kaline raced all the way to third when third baseman Bob Cox threw wild on his grounder.

It was Cash's turn to bat, but Manager Smith wasn't about to send a left-handed batter against Hamilton.

Back Out
"Hamilton has been making his living for years off left-handed hitters," Smith explained afterward. He already had summoned catcher Price from the bullpen, and now the right-hander took Cash's place at bat.

In came Hamilton's first pitch, and back out it went—all the way into the lower left field stands for a game-winning home run.

The Yankees had led all the way until then, having taken a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning on Joe Pepitone's run-scoring single and a two-run, bases-loaded single by Bill Robinson.

Baltimore also used the home run to beat Washington and Darold Knowles. Frank Robinson broke a 2-2 tie with his 15th homer in the eighth inning, and Dave Johnson hit a two-run shot later in the inning.

Knowles, who hadn't allowed an earned run since returning from military service last month, gave up all five Oriole runs.

Yearlings 'Introduced' Packer Rookie Camp Gives Hint That Drills Will be Much Tougher

BY LEE REMMEL
Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — "Lionel Aldridge tells me he expects training camp to be even tougher this year than it was last."

A trace of a smile played at the corners of Phil Bengtson's mouth as this conversation was relayed to him during a recent meeting by an executive of the Milwaukee television station which employs Aldridge as a sportscaster in the off-season.

"I think," Bengtson slyly replied, "he's right."

The Packer major-domo's informal observation was officially documented Monday afternoon as 25 unsuspecting yearlings were introduced to the Green Bay system on the South Oneida Street practice field during the opening session of the annual rookie camp.

Basic Elements

The afternoon began routinely enough for the shorts-clad hopefuls, who merely were acquainted with the basic elements of the Packer passing game in the first hour.

At that point, however, they were divided into groups and required to run eight consecutive quarter miles, with brief rest intervals, under the urging of taskmaster Wayne Robinson. Robinson, the official time-keeper, kept accelerating the pace with each quarter, frequently admonishing the runners to "pick it up, pick it up."

Then, when most members of the weary troupe were sure they were home free, they were called upon to run yet another mile before being excused.

"They really took off and ran, didn't they?" Bengtson later observed with satisfaction.

Typical Workout

He did not, he added, consider it to be an unduly rigorous regimen. "That was a typical workout — the same kind they would have had if they had been at home under our off-season running program," Bengtson pointed out. Everybody who is due to report to training camp July 16 did that at home today.

Elsewhere in the sparsely populated dressing room, center Bob Hyland respectfully suggested there had been one major difference between Monday's exertions and those he has been accustomed to in working out on his own.

"That's a lot of running."

especially on that grass," he said, sweeping the perspiration from his forehead. "That's a lot different than on the cinders."

He ruefully appended, "I ran couple of quarters on my own earlier, because I thought we wouldn't have any organized running today. Then I found out we had to run eight quarters."

Ran Extra One

"After we ran those, I ran an extra one — sprinted all the way — because I thought that was it... then I get in and find I have to run another mile."

Summing up the session, Bengtson was pleased to note, "There was only one guy who couldn't meet the standards. He was supposed to be doing the

Communication Needed
Pro, Collegiate Sports
Must Co-Exist, Agree
Convention Panelists

BY LEW FERGUSON
KANSAS CITY (AP) — Professional sports and collegiate athletics have no choice but to co-exist. The question is how to ease the frictions which frequently rub one side or the other wrong.

That was the consensus of panelists appearing before the fourth annual convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics here Monday to consider the topic "College-Professional Athletics — Can They Co-exist?"

"We will live together because we must live together," said pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "Competition is a fact of life."

"The pros aren't going to go away, and they're going to continue to be competition for the entertainment dollar," said Big Eight Commissioner Wayne Duke. "Saying it plainly, the pros are here to stay, and so are we."

Basic Answer

The panelists decided that better communication is the basic answer to misunderstanding between the two spheres.

They were particularly concerned about pro baseball signing players with college eligibility, and mediocre cooperation given pro baseball scouts by the colleges, even when the scouts seek to cooperate.

When Charles Neinas, assistant executive director of the NCAA, asked National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy, a panelist, why pro basketball had hampered efforts to enlist the best U.S. players for the 1968 Olympic team, Kennedy replied: "Why didn't somebody advise us of these situations at the time so we could do something about it?"

Pros' Methods

"The lines of communication must be maintained at all times," said Bill Reed, commissioner of the Big Ten. However, Reed added that the pros' methods sometimes "constitute threats to co-existence."

Another panelist, Stu Holcomb, former Northwestern University athletic director and now a vice president of the Chicago White Sox, proposed that baseball pump $500,000 per club into collegiate baseball in the future to build it to the level the pros want it to be.

Holcomb estimated 100 schools could receive $100,000 each. There was no indication the plan will be implemented, however.

Rix Yard, athletic director at Tulane, was the other panelist. "To me, it's not a question of can we co-exist, but how do we co-exist," said Yard.

Aids Program

He cited the fact that Tulane rents its 80,000-seat stadium, the Sugar Bowl, to the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League and said, "Believe me, the fact we rent to them greatly aids our athletic program."

Rozelle attacked the NCAA's policy which frowns on colleges renting their facilities to professional teams.

"I think," Rozelle said, "if a school thinks it fits its need to rent, it should be permitted to make that decision."

Rozelle cited areas of joint stadium ventures, security from gamblers and fighting pay television as those in which the pros and colleges can work very closely together.

same program at home, obviously he hadn't been ... but outside of that everybody was in pretty good shape.

"It will be the same thing the rest of the week," he went on. "We'll continue to have running in training camp, but once we get into it, we'll go down to 100-yard sprints. When we get into camp, of course, it will be a little more work. We're not giving them too much physical work right now."

Like Hyland, some of the rookies admitted it had been a somewhat more strenuous afternoon that they had expected.

Back For Second Try

Such as Jack Layland, a compactly constructed running back from University of Pacific back for a second try.

"I've been running," he said, "but not this much. I usually run two miles — we ran three today."

"Last year," Layland noted, "we just ran patterns in rookie camp ... it came as a surprise."

Bruce Nelson, a center from North Dakota State, Wryly observed, "I don't know if I was built to be a long distance runner."

"I've done quite a bit of running, but it's usually been on a track. We ran on grass today and, boy, that's something else I thought I ran 10 miles."

More of the same, he was informed, was in store for him and his colleagues today.

Nelson smiled and dryly rejoined, "Yippee."

Pack Patler — Joe Runk, the placekicking hopeful who was with Las Vegas in the Continental League last season, impressed by drilling home four consecutive efforts from 47 yards out and two of four from 52 with personnel director Pat Pepler serving as holder ... Quarterback Bart Starr, scheduled to appear, was called to Texas on business and super sub again filled in for him.

Zeke Bratkowski, who retired in February to become an assistant coach, joined sophomore Bill Stevens in passing to a variety of receivers ... A standout by reason of his size alone was Bill Hayhoe, 6-foot-8-inch draftee from USC who is being tried at tight end ... Jim Weatherwax is the latest addition to the Packers' Fathers' Club ... his wife, Joan, presented him with a 5-pound, 8-ounce son over the weekend ... he has been christened James Michael Weatherwax, Jr.

ing up on a squeeze bunt by Wayne Weatherly.

The Foxes opened the scoring in the game in the first when Jim Redmon tripled after Roger Reid had walked. Three hits in the fourth produced the tying run for Cedar Rapids.

Redmon struck the blow that led to the Foxes' win in the opener. He tagged the first pitch delivered by loser Jessie DuBose in the eighth for a triple. He waited at third while Max Correa grounded out to first and Weatherly struck out. George Hunter then walked. Edito Arteaga hit a slow roller to second baseman Gary Marlon who had an easy 20-foot throw to first for the final out of the inning, but he bobbled the ball allowing Redmon to score the winning run.

Beats The Throw

Cedar Rapids had scored a run in the first and DuBose made it stand up until the sixth when the Foxes knotted the score. Joe Bowen led off with a single and Correa ran for him. Weatherly bunted. DuBose tried to cut down Correa at second, but the speedy Venezuelan beat the throw and both runners were safe. Hunter also bunted and this time DuBose mishandled the ball in front of the plate and the bases were loaded.

DuBose struck out Arteaga, and then pinch-hitter Greg Howell hit a double-play ball to second. But shortstop Jorge Millan dropped the throw. He picked the ball up and tagged the base for an out on the runner who had stopped, but the tying run had scored.

Denny O'Toole was credited with the win in his first appearance in a Foxes uniform. He hurled the eighth inning.

Billy Williams' run-scoring single and Ron Santo's sacrifice fly.

Run-producing singles by Fred Patek and Bill Maseroni in the sixth had given the Pirates the lead.

Merritt retired the first 16 hitters he faced, gave up a sixth-inning single by Clarence Gaston and then nailed 10 more in order before John Sipin singled with two out in the ninth as the Reds handed the Padres their ninth consecutive setback—and third straight shutout.

Tony Perez' three-run homer off Gary Ross, 1-7, helped Merritt breeze to his seventh victory in 10 decisions.

Dennis Menke delivered three runs with a double and single and pinch hitter Gary Geiger drilled a bases-loaded triple for three more as the Astros swamped the Giants behind Don Wilson's six-hit pitching.

Dick Dietz sent San Francisco ahead 2-0 with a second-inning homer, but the Astros shot in front to stay in the third when Menke doubled in two runs and scored from second on Marty Martinez' infield hit.

SPORT FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW.

by John Behnke

They say records are made to be broken, but did you ever realize how many baseball records have NOT been broken in the last 70 years... No big leaguer has made a higher season batting average than Hugh Duffy's .438 in 1894... Nobody has scored more than 196 runs in a year as Billy Hamilton did in 1894... Nobody has stolen more bases than Harry Stovey's 156 in 1888... No pitcher has won more than 60 games in a season as Noss Redburn did in 1884... No pitcher has hurled 74 complete games in one season as Bill White did in 1879... And, no pitcher has struck out as many as 505 batters in one season as Matthew Kilroy did in 1886.

Do you know there's an auto race driver active in competition today who has no legs... He is Doug Rose... He lost both legs in an accident... But he got artificial legs, learned to drive with those artificial legs and is now appearing around the country in various auto races.

Did you know that the odds against being dealt a royal flush in poker are more than 600,000 to 1?

I bet you didn't know... Our colorful sport shirts are breaking popularity records. Come in and see these sure winners.

Rozelle Hopes Joe Will Return to Fold

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle, accused in some quarters of hounding Broadway Joe Namath out of the game, says he has hopes the New York Jets quarterback will return to the fold.

Rozelle commented Monday he would like to meet with Namath and talk things over soon. "No meeting is arranged, and they have not had any contact. But there are indications, said Rozelle, "we might be able to get together within a week. At least, I hope so."

The commissioner ordered Namath to sell his interest in a popular New York City restaurant-bar called Bachelors III, or face suspension from pro football. Namath retired rather than.

Action Delayed At Wimbledon

Arthur Ashe to Face Riessen in 1st Round Match

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — one of the world's top tennis stars faced jitters day at Wimbledon today after waiting 24 hours to get started.

The players, keyed up for the opening of the world's premier tournament, sat around for hours in their dressing rooms Monday waiting for the rain to stop.

It didn't—and the whole day's program was transferred to today.

The fans waited to see how the tension would affect some of the big duels in the first round. Arthur Ashe, the reigning U.S. open champion from Richmond, Va., faced a tough encounter with Marty Riessen of Evansville, Ill.

Ashe, who is seeded No. 5, has yet to prove that he has got over a bad spell of form which lasted throughout his tour of the European circuit this spring. He has been trying to shake off a nagging elbow injury.

Riessen, a former U.S. Davis Cup player, now tours with the World Championship Tennis group controlled by promoter Bob Briner.

To be Honored Sunday

Billy Williams Hopes
'It's the Beginning'

By JOE MOOSHIL
CHICAGO (AP) — Billy Williams, warming up for his 'Day' Sunday, keyed a comeback 5-4 victory for the Chicago Cubs Monday over the Pittsburgh Pirates in what is fast becoming the tit-for-tat rivalry. With the Cubs trailing 4-3 with one out and two on in the ninth, Williams broke an 0-for-8 slump with a game-tying single and chased the winning run to third. Ron Santo's sacrifice fly moved Williams' 10th straight triumph over Pittsburgh in Wrigley Field over a two-year span.

That alone is an outstanding fact but what embellishes the matter is the Cubs haven't won in Forbes Field since July 15 of last year and have lost nine straight in Pittsburgh including four games by one run each last week.

Santo kept clicking his heels in the Cub clubhouse and crying "That's the way they did it to us and that's the only way to do it to them. Come from behind and beat 'em by one."

Williams, a quiet man, said "I finally crushed the ball and I hope it's the beginning. It would be nice for me to have a good week considering Sunday."

Sunday is going to be "Billy Williams Day." Fans who wish to honor Billy can contribute to the Billy Williams Scholarship Fund or buy buttons for a quarter at the ball park.

The proceeds will provide college scholarships for deserving graduating seniors of two high schools in Billy's home area. They are the Mobile County Training School and Blount High School in Prichard, Alabama.

In addition to all this, providing there are no rainouts, Williams is not injured, Williams will break Stan Musial's National League record of 895 consecutive games when he appears in the second game of a double-header against St. Louis. He has not missed a game since Sept. 21, 1963.

"It'll be a great thrill if I break the record," said Williams. Musial gave me one of my first great thrills. It was in the 1962 All-Star game. My first when the late Fred Hutchinson put me in left field to replace Musial. That was something when the late Fred Hutchinson was now playing left field in place of Musial."

Lindsay Forces Seek Support of Liberals

Feel New York Mayor Can be Re-elected
In November as Independent Candidate

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Almost before the polls closed in the most astounding mayoral primary election in New York City history, a backstage struggle had started for the large and usually decisive liberal Democratic party vote, now homeless.

Defeated in the Democratic primary, he was elected as an independent in November. The stunned liberal leaders in the Democratic party today have not fixed on any single standard-bearer, but former Mayor Robert Wagner, who was trounced in the primary by the law-and-order campaign of City Controller Mario Procaccino, was sounded out early Wednesday morning before the final vote had even been counted.

Wagner was "not enthusiastic," one party leader told us. Another possibility is the longtime labor negotiator and power broker, Theodore Kheel, who came close to running in the Democratic primary himself.

To forestall this from happening, Lindsay and his highly capable campaign manager, Richard Aurelio, are making soundings as to the potential size and political clout of a Democrats-for-Lindsay organization. What they would like is quite obvious: an organization that would join under the Lindsay tent all defeated leaders in the Democratic primary. Part of this strategy is Lindsay's plan to get another line of the November ballot for himself, offering voters a chance to vote for him not as the nominee of the Liberal party but as a non-party independent.

In the immediate aftermath of Lindsay's defeat, his headquarters were swamped with telephone calls — many from followers of Herman Badillo, the most liberal Democrat in the Democratic primary — offering help in the fall campaign.

All this planning could go for naught if the liberal Democrats finally do decide to run a serious candidate of their own as an Independent-Democrat. If that happens, Lindsay's November vote would be split down the middle, and this division in

Lions Club Names New Officers at Sherwood Parley

SHERWOOD — New officers installed at the Lions Club meeting Friday by Howard Heimke, past district governor, were Geoffrey Mueller, president; Charles Gehl, first vice president; Edward Rogalska, second vice president, and Richard Brantmeier, third vice president.

Continuing in office will be Reynold Brantmeier, secretary-treasurer; Hilard Brantmeier, tall twister, and Irvin Zahring, lion tamer. The Rev. Michael Drexler and Clarence Weller were installed as directors.

Perfect attendance pins were awarded to 16 members, and two more members, David Fredricks and Clarence Weller, were inducted into the club. Their sponsors were Edward Rogalska and Clarence Mueller, respectively.

Reynold Brantmeier presented a plaque to 1969 president Allos Thiel in honor of his services getting the club organized this year.

The club is presently planning a benefit for William Kuepper, son of Mrs. Kathryn Kuepper, route 1, Menasha. Chairmen of the planning committee are Adrian Mader and Harley Gottfried.

liberal ranks would all but assure the election of Procaccino.

But even if it does not happen, the virulent anti-Lindsay sentiment — most of it squarely the result of racial backlash — coupled with the prospects of severe political crises that threaten the mayor in the next few months, must temper any quick judgment as to his election chances.

The mayor is highly vulnerable, for example, to race riots this summer (although he has staved off racial disasters for three consecutive years). He is endangered, too, by teacher union negotiations now being conducted with the city by Albert Shanker, the union president, who is no friend of the mayor's.

Moreover, it is not at all certain that the presumed "liberal" vote cast on Tuesday for such liberals as former Mayor Wagner will really swing to Lindsay. Pollster Oliver Quayle discovered in a survey he did for NBC that Procaccino was the second choice of fully 48 per cent of Wagner's presumptive vote, raising serious questions whether those Democrats will ever go to Lindsay.

But of all the hazards lying ahead of the defeated Lindsay, the greatest by far is the threat that a leading liberal Democrat, parading as an independent, will enter the November lists.

22 Teams Play in 'Y' Senior, Junior Cage Leagues

A total of 12 teams will play in the Appleton YMCA senior high school basketball leagues, which open play this week.

Teams competing Monday nights in the American League are Crystal Printing, Northern State Bank, First National Bank, Pond Sport Shop, Appleton State Bank and Fox River. Competing Thursday in the National League are Copy Craft, Inc., Appleton Trophy, Retson's, Goeman Insurance, Zussman's Grocery and Leath's Furniture.

Junior High School teams will also play in two leagues at the "Y". Competing Mondays in the Big Four circuit are Modern Graphic Arts, Riverside Paper, Appleton Structural Steel and Peerless Paint.

So, in an interview Monday, Rodgers was at his best talking about the ninth annual Coaches All-America football game here Saturday.

"Man, are we ever loaded with talent," said Rodgers, who will coach the West squad. And, believe me, these boys have come to play.

"Oh sure, I'd love to add O.J. Simpson," Rodgers admitted.

"In fact, I'm a great fan of O.J.'s. But it's not gonna take away from the game if he doesn't show."

Not Reached Terms

Simpson, the former Southern California flash, claims he cannot play in Saturday's game because he has not come to terms with the Buffalo Bills, the team which drafted him No. 1 in the college draft this year. Simpson reportedly is asking for a $600,000 pact.

But Rodgers, a native Atlantan, remains optimistic.

"Fortunately, last year probably was the best crop of college seniors ever," he said. "And, I've sure got my share of them on this team."

In addition to his own quarterback, Bobby Douglass, Rodgers also has a swift fleet of hard-running backs, including Paul Gipson of Houston, Eugene Morris of West Texas State, Bill Enyard of Oregon State and Ron Sayers of the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

"The West may have more size than us," said Joe Paterno of Penn State and the coach of the East, "but I believe we're about equal in ability."

Drop Back Well

"Our two quarterbacks—Marty Domres of Columbia and Buster O'Brien of Richmond are quick, have good arms and they both drop back real well," Paterno said.

The East also added Monday a slashing running back from Virginia, Frank Quayle. He will back up Bob Campbell of Penn State and Charles Jarvis of Army.

Superintendent Retires After 24 Years

Rawson Leaves Mark at Clintonville Schools

BY MILDRED LAIB
CLINTONVILLE — Twenty-four years of growth and achievement in the school system here are reflected in the leadership and direction of K.O. Rawson who is retiring as district superintendent on Sept. 1.

Rawson has devoted 42 years of his life to public school education.

Under his direction the school district has grown from 800 students and 35 staff members to 1,793 pupils and 91 members on the staff.

All or part of 31 one-room schools at Embarrass and Bear Creek have been attached to the district since 1951. The bus fleet has grown from five to 18 buses with some making double runs to transport pupils.

Expenditures Increase
During the early 1940's, school expenditures hovered around the $100,000 mark. The figure for next year is anticipated at $1,190,730.

These figures help show the tremendous growth during Rawson's tenure. A stronger educational program, both rural and city, has resulted from the extensive school reorganization. Through it all Rawson's concern in making any change has been, "Is it good for the children?"

The teachers have so much more to work with today, particularly in reference to libraries, according to Rawson. In 1945-46, there were a total of 7,083 books. Today there are 25,948 books in the libraries.

There were radio programs then. Now there are radio programs, television, film strip machines, movies, overhead projectors, opaque projectors, and science equipment way beyond our dreams 24 years ago, the retiring educator notes.

Higher Standards
Rawson points out that much more training is required of teachers today. Of the 91 teachers, there are only two who do not have a bachelor's degree and 14 have masters degrees.

Another big change is guidance. In the early days, the principal and teachers had to do most of it.

"I think we are doing a much better job of gearing our instruction to individual capabilities now, and I am most proud of our continuous program in reading and arithmetic in our primary grades. Not all children are on the same book on the same day. More adept pupils are encouraged to move as fast and as far as they can."

Federal Help
"There certainly has been a tremendous amount of help for the underprivileged — the slow learner — under federal programs. We haven't had 100 per cent success, but have done a lot for many of those children."

Rawson took part in the movement that closed up the county superintendent's offices, and formed the Cooperative Educational Service Agency (CESA). He served on the state superintendent's committee to draft legislation which brought about this change.

He served three years on the State Curriculum Council, an advisory group to the Department of Public Instruction, in curriculum development. He also served two years on the State Science Evaluation Committee which produced state tests in general science.

In 1960, Rawson was selected by Columbia University Teachers' College for an administrative workshop. Only one person from each state was selected for this workshop.

Swedish Program
In 1963, he was chosen through the American Association of School Administrators to study Swedish Schools as a guest of that government.

Rawson served as the first executive secretary of the Wisconsin Association of School District Administrators, served six years on the board of directors, was president-elect in 1960, and president in 1961. He is a member of the executive board of the Fox Valley Curriculum Study Council as well as a member of other educational organizations.

He has been serving for 24 years as a member of the public library board and for 15 years as a member of the park commission; he is a past president and director of the Rotary Club, a member of the Masonic Lodge, was the United Methodist choir director for 10 years and a church trustee for six years.

Rawson is a native of Elden, Ill. He received his master's degree at the University of Wisconsin and has taken postgraduate studies at Columbia University and the University of Wisconsin.

Rawson is listed in "Who's Who in the Midwest" and "Who's Who in Education." Since announcing his retirement, he has received a citation from the state legislature congratulating him "for his contribution to education and for his work as a civic leader in his school, community, state and nation."

Received Honors

Rawson was honored by the Cooperative Educational Service Agency at a retirement dinner. He and Mrs. Rawson also were honored at the spring dinner meeting of the Clintonville Education Association. The students at the senior high school dedicated the 1969 annual to him and two other members of the faculty.

As Rawson spoke at the 1969 commencement exercises he said "He found, as he looked back, that there are moments in the life of a superintendent that stand out as golden nuggets, never to be forgotten."

"In every child's life there ought to be contact with a master teacher who can strike a spark and fan it into a flame. The trust of teaching must include humility, dignity, integrity, respect for truth, the quality of patience, honest fairness, all together adding up to a total of lifelong influence and example. What totally makes up the teacher becomes part of the pupil," Rawson said.

OSU Considers Offering Afro-American Program

The feasibility of an Afro-American studies program at Oshkosh State University will be investigated by a committee now being appointed by the school's Dean of Letters and Science.

"I feel it would be desirable to have a program in Afro-American studies," Dean Arthur Darken says. But whether it would be feasible at OSU, and how it would be set up, will have to be investigated by the committee, he says.

Darken says the committee will include 10-15 members, including students, some of them black, and faculty members from a variety of disciplines within the school of letters and science.

He said he expects to have the full committee appointed within two weeks, and that they will meet this summer, if possible. Otherwise, they will begin meeting in the fall.

Program By 1970?
"I would like to see some kind of a program started by the fall of 1970," Darken says. He said it would take that long for the program to receive university and Board of Regents approval.

Darken says that to his knowledge, an Afro-American studies program is not offered at any other university in the state.

"A program like this is important because I think the education that most students have had has been deficient in areas of black experience," Darken says.

"The main concern at Oshkosh is not the few black students, but the 12,000 white students we have whose education is lacking in this area," he continued.

Darken said the committee will determine whether the program should be offered as a major or minor, and how many courses it should include. "It may be desirable to combine it with our African studies program," he said.

If a black studies program were approved by the Darken committee, it would still need approval of the all-university curriculum committee, OSU President Roger Guiles and the Board of Regents of State Universities.

Darken said he had not discussed the black studies proposal with Guiles, but he said Guiles "is very interested in curriculum reform and providing relevant courses for all students."

Darken said students were being appointed to the committee because "they should be involved as voting members in curriculum development," Appleton police. A delinquency finding was withheld at that time.

He said they are now involved in the all-university curriculum committee and were also helped develop the religion program in the school of letters and science.

The dean said he is now preparing reading material for committee members on black studies programs at other universities and the educational needs involved in such a program.

Trial Ordered On Check Counts

Judge Warns Boy Of Seriousness Of Possession Charge

With a warning that if he had been an adult he could have faced a long prison sentence, Outagamie County Judge Raymond P. Dohr Monday found a 17-year-old youth delinquent in connection with a charge of possessing marijuana.

Dohr placed the youth under the custody of the Outagamie County Department of Social Services until he is 18 years old.

"If that doesn't work out, there will be no alternative but to take you from your home," Dohr warned the Appleton youth.

Dohr told a county welfare caseworker that with closer supervision the boy probably "could be straightened out." The youth has been under supervision of the county agency since last August, when he appeared in Dohr's court on a burglary charge brought by Appleton police. A delinquency finding was withheld at that time.

Caught at School

An Appleton detective told the court Monday that the youth was caught in a hallway at Appleton High School-West with a small bag of marijuana he later told police he purchased for $7.50. School officials called police on April 30.

The boy told detectives he smoked some of the marijuana, at High Cliff State Park and at his home. He said he had never used any other drugs.

The court was told that the youth flunked three high school subjects last term and that he was absent from school 28 days.

A 16-year-old Appleton boy who sold the 17-year-old the marijuana was found delinquent earlier this month and was placed under one year's supervision to the county welfare agency.

Marijuana Case Nets LU Student 3 Years Probation

Three years probation was ordered Monday for Gordon W. Tawse, 18, Baltimore, Md., who on June 5 was found guilty on two counts of marijuana possession.

Circuit Court Judge Andrew W. Parnell first sentenced Tawse, to two two-year terms in the state reformatory, but then stayed sentence and imposed probation to the State Department of Health and Social Services.

Parnell ordered Tawse to "stay away from drugs," and pay court costs.

A Circuit Court jury deliberated only a half hour June 5 before finding Tawse guilty of having marijuana in his possession Feb. 22 and Feb. 28. Appleton police, working through a narcotics informant, brought both felony counts.

Tawse, formerly of London, England, a former Lawrence University student, was free on $1,500 bond pending sentencing.

Union, Contractors Reach Terms

Major Valley Strike Averted

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer
A strike against general construction contractors from Fond du Lac north to Marinette has been averted.

Peace between the Fox Valley General Contractors Association and four major Teamsters Union locals was assured Monday with disclosure that agreement was reached over the weekend on a new three-year pact.

The contract calls for a $1.80 per hour wage and fringe benefit package through June 1, 1971.

It was negotiated by representatives of the association and Appleton, Green Bay, Fond du Lac-Oshkosh and Manitowish Teamsters locals during a mediation session at Oshkosh Friday, conducted by Philip Simon of the U.S. Mediation and Conciliation Service district office at Green Bay.

Confirm Details

Merle Phelen, Fond du Lac, chief negotiator for the association, which is comprised of 50 major contractors throughout the Fox Valley and Northern Wisconsin, along with about 100 sub-contractors, confirmed details of the new contract.

They were concurred in by Robert Schlieve, Appleton, secretary-treasurer of Local 563, and the chief negotiator for Teamsters Joint Council 39.

The association contractors and union locals have bargained jointly in recent years on new wage agreements.

Life of the contract runs from June 1, 1968 through June 1, 1971. When the former contract expiration date came up a year ago, the terms were extended by mutual consent.

Agreement Inevitable
Agreement was inevitable in recent weeks when both sides met and reported progress was being made on a new agreement, which the association and union spokesmen said, were in line with the industry pattern.

The $1.70 cash settlement in the three-year contract was spread out as follows: 40 cents the first year, 70 cents the second and 60 cents the third.

As of June 1 this year the employer pension contribution was boosted from $8 to $9 a week, and under terms of the new pact it will be increased from $9 to $10 June 1, 1970.

Effective June 1 this year the association members agreed to a $6 monthly contribution per employee to the Teamsters employee health-welfare fund.

Language Changes

There were also some language changes over the previous contract, meeting industry-wide revisions, according to Phelen and Schlieve.

No ratification vote on the new contract was required of the union membership as the bargaining committee had been given authority to reject or approve a new agreement.

Both sides said they were happy to reach a settlement on a new contract without having a work stoppage. Three years ago the association was plagued by strikes of various building trades unions during the summer.

With the settlements that have now been reached—capped by the Association and Teamsters entering into a three-year contract—and major construction is expected to proceed without any labor-management problems until 1972.

No Threat

While there reportedly had been some hard bargaining by both sides, the direct threat of a strike was not raised in recent weeks as negotiators for the association and unions made progress as they headed into the home stretch.

The Teamsters had indicated after arriving at a settlement of the long strike against the seven-member Fox Valley Construction Material Suppliers Association recently, that the general contractors' group would be given top priority when it came to new contract discussions.

It was also reported the Fox Valley Utility Contractors Association had a representative sitting in with the management team, and said his group would also honor the terms of the new contract.

Dale Electors To Decide on Sewage Plant

DALE — Electors will decide whether or not to approve a $300,000 sanitary facility at a public hearing, 8 p.m. Wednesday in the community hall.

The proposed facility has been surveyed by the Northeast Regional Planning Commission and would include construction of a treatment plant and installation of sewage lines.

Action to plan the facility was started by Town of Dale board members and village residents, and a sanitary board consisting of three village members, which was formed May 1.

Wilfred Coenen, Dale, a member of the board, said the sanitary district has been proposed because some homes in the area have improper drainage and septic tanks.

He said the treatment plant proposed could cost from $85,000 to $100,000.

Up to 60 per cent of the cost might be available in state funds, he said, although the community has not applied under any state programs for aid yet.

State law requires that 85 per cent of these taxes be returned to the taxing districts in which they were earned, Flath explained. The rest of the taxes are retained by the state.

"This year we are stressing communications and have planned a tour each week to take the children to communications centers, including a newspaper, school, radio station and the telephone company," William Williams, elementary principal, said at the close of the first week's session.

Also being offered this summer are courses in applied science, special physical education, library study, and remedial reading and mathematics. The program ends on July 25.

Pupils in the federally-supported program are selected by their classroom teachers.

The summer school staff is comprised of Mrs. Joyce Parmenter, Mrs. Donna Lavold, Mrs. Eva Peterson, Mrs. Beverly Winkler, Mrs. Arlene Woolsey, Mrs. Violet Handschke and Francis Gohla.

Three high school students on the staff under the National Youth Corps program are Laurie Hobson, Sally Pelzer and Barbara Becker.

Services for Major Jobe Wednesday

Funeral services for Major Robert E. Jobe, 31, who died when his F111A jet crashed in Nevada mountains last February, will be in Appleton Wednesday morning.

His body and that of another crewman on the jet fighter were found last week on a 9,000-foot mountain 50 miles east of Elko, Nev. The plane had disappeared on a training mission out of Nellis Air Force Base, Las Vegas.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. at St. Theresa Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. Joseph Cemetery where military graveside services will be held. The cortege will form at 10:30 a.m. at the Bretschneider-Trettin Funeral Home. There will be no visitation. A memorial fund has been established.

Jobe, a native of Chicago, graduated from Appleton High School in 1955 and from Drake University in 1959. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Drake.

He served 10 years in the Air Force, during which time he saw service in France and Vietnam.

Jobe is survived by his wife, the former Barbara O'Brian of Appleton; a son, a daughter, his mother, Mrs. T. J. Sherry, and his step-father, T. J. Sherry, Appleton.

Mayor Can Tell Big Fish Story

Appleton's mayor George Buckley was telling fish stories Monday and enjoying every minute of it.

Buckley caught a 10-pound Northern, measuring close to a yard, at his Post Lake Cottage over the weekend.

"It's the biggest catch I've ever made," commented Buckley, an ardent fisherman.

He was fishing off the cottage pier and trying out a new plug when the whopper hit.

Buckley said a game warden nearby helped him scoop the big fish into a net and has pictures to prove it.

However, there is a problem in the Buckley household. The question has to be resolved whether to eat or mount the prize catch which is presently "on ice."

Fund Raises $10,000 for Transplants

KAUKAUNA — Nearly $10,000 has been raised to pay the expenses of a kidney transplant operation for 12-year-old Mary DeCoster, according to David Hartjes, trustee of the funding raising committee.

Mary, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert DeCoster, 214 Diedrich St., will undergo transplant surgery about July 1. Her brother, Thomas, is the donor. The girl is now recovering at University Hospital in Madison after surgery to remove the diseased kidney.

Local people, concerned with the cost of the transplant operation, established a Mary DeCoster Kidney Fund late last year with Sister Shirley, principal at Holy Cross school where Mary was a sixth grader, as chairman.

As word of the fund drive spread, donations came in from business, industry, service clubs and individuals throughout the area.

Hartjes said response to the fund drive was tremendous and the DeCoster family and fund drive committee have expressed appreciation to the response of the community.

Park Group Claims Schools Not Available for Recreation

Board of Education Criticized That Facilities Not Open for Use

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Claims were made Monday that buildings and grounds under the jurisdiction of the Appleton Board of Education are not being put to best use when it comes to community-wide recreation programs.

The allegations—made by two representatives of the park-recreation commission—prompted a St. Louis planning consultant to advise members of the city plan commission to "get to the root of the problem."

Robert Grossman, park-recreation planner for Harland Bartholomew and Associates, indicated it was a matter that would have to be resolved before Appleton could implement the master park and recreation plan his firm is preparing for the city through a federal grant.

Grossman was obviously uneasy and did not want to become involved in a power struggle between the district school board and city council.

He seemed surprised that some of the conditions alleged with regard to school building use existed.

Program Stymied

Chairman Ralph Gertsch of the Appleton Park-Recreation Commission and Lloyd Koehnke, city recreation director, repeated claims the city's recreation program was being stymied by the difficulty in obtaining the use of school buildings and grounds from the board of education.

Grossman said it was logical that in addition to serving their educational purpose, school buildings in the district should be the center of recreation activities for children as well as adults.

Park Supt. Roger Rindt at one point also told the group he did not think that grounds surrounding some public school buildings were being put to their best use.

It was claimed that near Appleton High School-East where a neighborhood park had been planned, the school board got possession of 12 to 16 acres and intends to use it as a parking lot. Other land in the area is being earmarked by the school board for a driver training layout, it was claimed.

School Board Accused

The allegations were that the school board was guilty of "siphoning off" valuable park and recreation sites with no regard for land costs and proper usage.

"When we look for sites for recreation activities there is the constant struggle over who controls them and limitations are placed on my department," Koehnke commented.

Citing the $5 million plus East High layout again, he claimed the gates to the athletic field were padlocked and unavailable for general public use.

"You have many fine school buildings if the facilities cannot be used for recreation and other programs," Grossman commented.

"I don't see why the public makes such investments in buildings in the facilities cannot be fully used," he added.

Communication Needed

George Narovec, a member of the plan commission, suggested there should be better communication between the school board and city council over such things. He said it was up to those two bodies to settle the jurisdiction question as it affected the park-recreation programs.

Grossman advised that if school buildings were not being used to their fullest recreation advantage, someone should find out why.

He inferred that before any future park recreation plan can be implemented, the matter of public building usage would have to be resolved.

20-Day Sentence for Disorderly Conduct

Santos Anaya, 42, Shiocton, was sentenced to 20 days in jail Monday after he pleaded guilty to a disorderly conduct charge brought following a disturbance at his home Saturday.

Outagamie County Judge Raymond P. Dohr granted Anaya Huber Law (work release) privileges.

Anaya, who was placed on probation following conviction on a disorderly conduct charge last July, was taken into custody by Outagamie County and Shiocton police. The court was told that Anaya and his wife got into an argument over his paycheck. He reportedly struck her and threatened her.

Truck Makes Sauce Out of Tomato Load

A van truck loaded with seven tons of tomatoes overturned on U. S. 45 at Manley Road, 1½ miles south of Hortonville, about 7 p.m. Monday.

Outagamie County police said Marvin N. Haubrich, 43, 47 11th St., Clintonville, driver of the truck, escaped injury.

Haubrich told the police he was northbound on 45 when he swerved to the shoulder of the road to avoid striking a car ahead of him that had stopped prior to turning left onto Manley Road. The truck rolled onto its right side.

Police said a portion of the load of tomatoes was destroyed.

State Democrats Look Ahead

The last few years have brought some keen disappointments to the Democratic Party of Wisconsin. Professionals and academicians of politics tend to regard the rule of the statehouse as the most reliable test of the strength of a political organization. For six years earlier in this decade, Wisconsin had Democrats in the governor's office. Democrats managed twice during that period to win control of one house of the legislature, the state assembly, which has tended to swing with gubernatorial elections. (That rule of thumb of our state politics will require modification soon, with future candidates for governor running for four year terms, while assemblymen will continue to compete for seats with a more modest two year tenure.)

Today the state capitol's elective places are in the control of the Republicans, who started their comeback with the election of Gov. Knowles five years ago. If there is any cause for satisfaction among the Democratic loyalists, it lies in the fact that Wisconsin's two U.S. Senate seats are occupied by Democrats, an unusual circumstance in the political history of our state.

The recent Democratic voluntary organization convention at Stevens Point revealed a number of things, not all of them calculated to encourage the convinced Democrat. The absence of many of the best known of the "regulars" in the party machinery was conspicuous.

The prominence of many newcomers and their assumption of leading roles in the formulation of resolutions and the control of floor debate was equally noteworthy, although some of their pronouncements, for relaxation of the laws on marijuana as one example, of several, were not precisely calculated to warm the cockles of the hearts of the old party liners who have supported the Democratic cause in fair weather and foul.

Perhaps the most important of the practical consequences of the convention was the revelation of the virtual certainty that the Democrats will have a difficult, costly, enervating and probably divisive fight for the nomination of their gubernatorial candidate next year. We are not persuaded that Assemblyman Huber, the legislative leader, or Donald Peterson, the pro-McCarthy spokesman in state politics last year, will be among the contestants. But being mentioned for high office is a kind of oblique compliment, but we do not blame them for extracting from their publicity in this connection such satisfaction as they can.

The chief contenders, with every early sign that they will fight bitterly, giving no quarter and asking none, are the men who squared off for the nomination in 1966, Patrick J. Lucey and David Carley. In that year Lucey's margin over Carley was fairly impressive. But Carley is evidently determined to try again, which will mean that the money and energy spent, not to mention the organization fractures that will result from the conflict of two abrasive personalities, will almost surely weaken the party for the main encounter later, with the nominee to be chosen by the Republicans, as successors to the ticket leadership provided three times by Warren Knowles.

U. S. Blunder in Spain

Opponents to some of our military aid projects have charged that when we supply arms to regimes that are something less than democratic we are providing the tools, not only to resist outside aggression but to stifle opposition at home.

The United States military command in Europe has made an even greater blunder. It has authorized the participation of American forces based in Spain in maneuvers aimed at putting down any theoretical rebellion against the dictatorial regime of General Franco.

It may be argued that any disorder upsets stability and opens the door to anarchists and Communists. This has been the quiet defense of some of our military and aid policies among military regimes in Latin America. But maintaining in power dictatorial regimes, whatever the traditions of the country, can hardly be claimed as defense of the free world.

The United States has just reached "in principle" a two year agreement with Spain for the continuance of our military bases there in exchange for about $50 million worth of military hardware. We do not have a mutual security arrangement with the Franco regime even to help protect it from outside aggressors. We certainly do not need to help it put down the rising forces of change that have been apparent there in the last few months.

Inflation Also a Problem in Vietnam

One of the problems that plagues South Vietnam is a continuing inflation brought about in part by the costs of the war and the influx of American goods and dollars. But sincere efforts of the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu to curb the ever-increasing spiral are meeting with difficulties.

At the urging of American economic advisors, the Saigon government imposed by decree tax increases on about 200 imported items. Increases on some luxuries such as television sets were as high as 50 per cent.

But the South Vietnamese House of Representatives which had not been consulted on the taxes has objected strenuously. Many of the members of the House are among the more wealthy businessmen of South Vietnam and they don't like to see their profits cut. The House voted to urge President Thieu to dismiss his premier, Tran Van Huong, whom the House blamed for the increased taxes. And in the infighting among the ambitious, it has been rumored that President Thieu may even have been behind the House move since he and his premier have not been getting along.

The refusal of governments in developing countries to impose sufficient taxes on the wealthy or to enforce them has been a problem the United States has faced in many parts of the world because of our aid policies. It is especially acute in Latin America where many leaders resent the regulations surrounding Alliance For Progress loans and grants which require certain economic, social and political changes.

There may be grounds for opposition to efforts by the United States to bring about reforms. It is a type of colonialism and we can expect resentments from peoples seeking national identity and self respect.

But Americans, now faced with the continuation of the surtax, are not likely to be very sympathetic to the attempts of rich South Vietnamese to avoid paying their fair share.

On The Right
Nixon Should Study Feasibility of Making Combat Duty Voluntary

BY WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

President Nixon handled Mr. Clark Clifford with great dispatch and not, I expect, without a little zest. The question was put to Mr. Nixon, what did he think of the proposals of Clark Clifford that our troops should be withdrawn from Vietnam at the rate of one hundred thousand this year, and another hundred thousand next? Oh, said Mr. Nixon, he hopes to do much better than that — and in any case, better than Mr. Clifford was able to do. During his year as Secretary of Defense, all that he and the enemy finally agreed upon was the shape of the negotiating table. During those negotiations American casualties were at the highest rate of the war.

Mr. Nixon's policy — it becomes increasingly clear — is to reinvest the South Vietnamese government with the responsibility for providing its own defense with, however, unlimited, or virtually unlimited, access to American materiel. For this policy in theory there is noble precedent. "Give us the tools and we'll do the job," Winston Churchill said to us, shortly before we sent him three or four million men. No matter, the idea is sound: and

Buckley

Mr. Nixon's next step should quickly be announced. It is to make combat duty in Vietnam voluntary. MAY DISARM PROTESTORS
The desirability of this commitment is more obvious than its feasibility. Under ideal conditions, just to begin with, fighting should be voluntary, even though service is not. Sometimes it becomes necessary to conscript the general citizenry not only to serve but also to fight. But when the presumption in favor of voluntary fighting can be indulged, what is the argument for not doing so?

Granted that there are ambiguous lines between the combatant and the non-combatant. In the second world war, more people were killed who served in the air force as support personnel, than aviators. Still, it is uniquely the command to kill, rather than the risk of being killed, that galls the refractory conscience. It does not follow at all that if such an order were given, opposition to the war in Vietnam would end: any more than it follows that if we ended the war in Vietnam, peace would return to our colleges and our ghettos. It does follow that the single most compelling argument would be taken away from the protesters. No American would thereafter be called to engage in combat activity if he elected not to do so.

What of the feasibility? The Pentagon will inform you that 60 per cent of its troops in Vietnam are combat troops, which would put the figure at 320,000. In fact, among these there are many who, although they run risks, are not expected to fire rifles or toss hand grenades. A total of 35,000 men have been killed in four and one half grueling years of war, during which period almost two million American servicemen have served in Vietnam. The point of these general calculations is that a little realistic reclassification would almost certainly reveal that the true combat soldiering in Vietnam is the work of probably no more than 150,000.

SENSE OF PRIDE
The United States has a standing army in excess of 800,000. It is by no means the case that one hundred per cent of those who are conscripted to serve would elect not to fight. To begin with there is in many people a sense of pride which gravitates towards the position that however unpopular a war is, if others of their own age are fighting and taking their chances, so will they. For another, there are the material rewards. Already they are on the books, as with aviators who receive more pay for high-hazard duty. And there is, as we note, the standing army, all of them composed of volunteers, which could be redeployed so as to intensify the availability in Vietnam of professional soldiers.

Pending, of course, the summation of Richard Nixon's goal, which is to let the Vietnamese do their own fighting. Our sacrifices would still be substantial, even as they were substantial in the Second World War (curious, how infrequently we heard it said in those days: let the Asians do their own fighting). President Nixon would accomplish a great deal for the general tranquility by consulting with his military advisers and then writing that liberating decree.

People's Forum
Detective Tells Why Vagrants Are Arrested

Editor, The Post-Crescent.

In reply to Walt Christopher's letter of Sunday, May 15, "Why do Police Pick on Vagrants," it is obvious that he is not a friend of law enforcement in any form, which may explain why he knows so little about the law and the way it is enforced.

The Wisconsin Statute defines Vagrancy as:

(1). A person with physical ability to work, who is without lawful means of support and does not seek employment; or (2). A person found loitering near, or in any structure, vehicle or private grounds who is there without the consent of the owner and is unable to account for his presence; or (3). A prostitute who loiters on the streets or in a place where intoxicating liquors are sold, or a woman who, in a public place, solicits men to commit a crime against sexual morality; or (4). A person known to be a professional gambler or known as a frequenter of gambling places or derives part of his support from begging or as a fortune teller or similar impostor.

Many times after a person is arrested for vagrancy, the subsequent FBI check shows this person is wanted by another jurisdiction for a serious crime.

In 1968, the Appleton Police Department made 288 non-traffic arrests. Fourteen of these arrests were for vagrancy. Of these fourteen, eight were citizen complaints such as shoplifting, pan handling, etc. The other six were arrests made by the police officers who found the subjects sleeping in washrooms, coal yards and doorway.

"Buffalo Bill" was arrested on a citizen complaint, a citizen who, had offered him a place to stay for the night and five days later had to call the police and have him removed.

This is the same "Buffalo Bill" who struck one of his benefactors in the face. This boy had helped bail him out of jail, helped him find the place playing in a local night spot and after his first performance, when the boy tried to get him back on his feet and got some coffee for him, so he would be sober for his next act, "Buffalo Bill" struck him.

Walt Christopher objects to our arresting bar maids and Go-Go girls. I wonder if he also objects to our recent arrest of the dealer in pornography.

It is Walt Christopher and others like him whose cries, "the police are not sufficiently justified in making arrests; they are exaggerating their role in enforcing and interpreting the law," who cry brutally when the police are called in to enforce the law at the scenes of riots and demonstrations that are making enforcing the law so difficult and creating the almost insurmountable odds that he speaks of.

It is not that the police don't know who may have committed a brutal murder or are burglarizing homes that prevent them from making arrests. It is because they have to be more concerned about the rights of the criminal, not the victim.

To quote J. Edgar Hoover, "Vigorous law enforcement is needed to cope with crime and violence in our nation. It cannot be achieved if arresting officers are required to make an apologetic approach to every killer, rapist, robber, and thug roaming our streets. If the rule of law is to prevail, the law must be enforced."

Highway Construction
Plan Good, But It Will Have Its Detractors

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — There is undoubtedly intense interest and support around the state for the acceleration of major highway construction and key bridge replacement projects as proposed by the legislature's advisory committee on highways.

In many districts agitation for major state trunk highway modernization has been increasing with the passing years. The demand for a as endorsed in a spring referendum vote amending the state constitution and an infusion of additional money into the highway budget through the transfer of sales tax revenues from road machinery, motor vehicle tires and other items related to highways.

OBJECTIONS *APPEAR CERTAIN

There will surely be objections to the latter proposal. It appears to be a plan to "rob Peter to pay Paul," as Gov. Knowles recently put it in another context. Transferring sales tax revenues from the general fund would merely mean that the legislature would have to tap new tax sources to replace the transferred dollars.

As everybody now knows, or ought to know, a huge state general fund budget looms for the next two years under any version of a biennial budget that is likely to be enacted into law.

The announcement of the committee also indicated a desire to designate the routes that would be chosen for acceleration of the improvement schedule. Those that were cited were reasonable enough to those acquainted with the highway geography of the state.

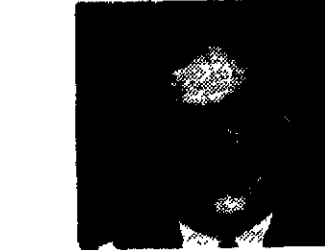

But to write into the bill the names and locations of the routes is virtually to guarantee and to arouse the pork barrel instincts of the politicians in the legislature.

TWO BIG QUESTIONS

A glance at the map shows that most of the routes designated for high priority are in eastern Wisconsin. It is likely that an assemblyman or a senator from western or upper Wisconsin will resist the temptation to make himself a hero to his constituents by adding amendments?

Or is it likely that many of the members of the legislature will resist the importunities of their own local civic associations, chambers of commerce, and whatever?

In an academic view, the legislature is not equipped to make such judgments. That is the business of the professionals in the highway administration. In a pragmatic view, it is politically dangerous. The whole plan may totter and fall, at a time when real progress could be made with a more prudent approach.

Wyngaard

modern traffic corridor between Rock County and Milwaukee, for the reconstruction of Highway 53 in northwestern Wisconsin, for the replacement of sizeable segments of antiquated and worn Highway 114 along the Lake Michigan shore are a few examples out of scores that could be cited.

In numerous cities of the state, including the most populous sections of those situated on main line highways, archaic bridges are costly and irritating bottlenecks. Perhaps there is no public works enterprise that could be suggested for the Fox River Valley that would be more enthusiastically hailed in the cities there than one to assure the reasonably early replacement of half a dozen strategic bridges with new spans designed for modern traffic densities.

BACKING IS FORECAST

Thus it can be forecast with considerable confidence that the recent Hutnik-LaFave report outlining such an accelerated construction plan and inviting bipartisan sponsorship for it in the legislature will have powerful backing.

Yet with the merit of the general concept conceded and the public interest evident, there will be questioning of the details of the legislative proposal as it was outlined at the annual conference of road administrators in Door County.

It proposed an acceleration in major highway construction far beyond the capacity of the current state highway budget through a program of bonding

Strictly Personal
Main Job of Police Is to Prevent Crime

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Here's a multiple-choice question for you: Are the police supposed to be (a) human; (b) subhuman; (c) superhuman; or (4) inhuman? The proper answer is none of these.

First, the police are not supposed to be "human". If someone calls them dirty names, or spits at them, they are not supposed to respond as an ordinary citizen might. When they "overreact" to such insults, they are behaving in a most unprofessional manner.

Second, police are not supposed to be "subhuman". If they are rough or brutal or coarse or allow their personal prejudices to dominate their conduct, they have no business being on the police force.

Third, police are not supposed to be "superhuman". They should not be asked to work long hours for low pay, to be subjected to political influences, to perform without adequate protection, to enforce laws that are not enforceable, or enforceable only on a discriminatory basis.

Fourth, police are not supposed to be "inhuman". They are supposed to exhibit sympathy, warmth and compassion for the lost, the confused, the upset, the defenseless, the ignorant, and the downtrodden. This, basically, is what gives a policeman a "good image" in the community.

But the police system that operates in many, if not most, American cities tends to bring out all the worst, and unprofessional, traits and to subdue all the good ones.

Unlike the British bobby, the American cop has little status or respect in the community: is often the unwitting tool of political influences; has not been adequately trained to separate his personal biases from his professional duties; looks upon himself as the defender of one part of society against another; and too often acts as his own judge and jury and prosecutor and sometimes executioner.

Both the man who praises our "men in blue" and the one who attacks them as "fascist pigs" are suffering from a delusion of what legitimate police power really is. We suffer from the same national delusion about district attorneys — we imagine they are supposed to "prosecute" offenders, when their real task is to mediate between the claims of the state and the rights of citizens.

Just as we (wrongly) expect our district attorneys to get convictions rather than assure justice, we expect our police to get criminals, when their principal job is to prevent crime. And the prevention of crime is possible only when the police are independent, professionally trained, and imbued with a loyalty to the total community, not to the self-serving and protective rules of the police force itself.

Your Money's Worth Congress Cuts Funds; Tax Auditing Suffers

BY SYLVIA PORTER
The odds have shrunk to the smallest in many years that the Internal Revenue Service will pluck your income tax return for an audit out of the millions filed by American individuals. Similarly, the odds have been slashed that the IRS will select your corporation's income tax return for an audit out of the millions filed by corporations in our land.

The IRS is astonishingly behind in its processing of our individual income tax returns.

At a time when our tax returns were due to be under the most intensive and efficient scrutiny ever, the Treasury's whole processing-auditing system is in a startling mess. What's more, there's no way the situation can be substantially improved soon.

Congress Cut Funds
The reasons? They are: first, the Treasury's switch to the computer; and second, Congress' short-sighted decision a while ago to try to save money in the budget by cutting back the funds allotted to the IRS for hiring revenue agents.

When the IRS adopted Automatic Data processing in the early 1960s and began entering our individual income tax information on a national ADP master file, we were promised (warned) that this mechanization would lead to an enormously more efficient processing examination system.

But what has happened is precisely the opposite. An analysis by Leon Gold, chief tax expert of the Research Institute of America, reveals that:

—The proportion of audited individual returns has dropped from 5.6 per cent of returns filed in fiscal '63 to 3.6 per cent for '68. It is expected to decline to 3.1 per cent for fiscal '69 and to a mere 2.7 per cent for '70.

—The per cent of corporate returns audited is to fall to 10.4 per cent in fiscal '70 from 12.3 per cent in fiscal '63.

—Underlining this even more is the fact that in this period, the number of returns with adjusted gross income of $10,000 or more is doubling — from 8,470,000 in '63 to an anticipated 20 million in 1970.

—As for entering the individual return data on the national ADP master file, that's at least 15 million returns behind schedule! These are primarily full-paid returns — no tax due or refund owed — which are processed after returns showing refunds or underpayments.

Find More Errors

And even this is not the full tale. The computer system has been identifying far more errors and omissions than the previous manual filing systems — and so while Congress has been compelling personnel cutbacks, there has been an immense increase in correspondence to correct returns and straighten out accounts on top of he pouring volume of returns.

The available IRS staff has simply not been able to manage the workload with the result that it has become typical for the computer to reply to a taxpayer who writes about his tax return by just sending him another bill. Complaint, bill, complaint, bill, on and on to a maddening degree.

Says my always cool friend, Leon Gold, "this may seriously affect the public's attitude."

Even assuming the IRS gets all the extra money it requests and is able to hire additional personnel, it will take considerable time to correct the mess. New workers must be trained; there has to be a lag between money and adequate manpower.

Meanwhile, the IRS is trying to cop by concentrating on more office audits with poor and poorly educated taxpayers and more correspondence audits with higher income taxpayers; and by using tax technicians in the office instead of revenue agents in the field to audit small business returns without big inventory problems or accrual accounting and medium income nonbusiness returns.

It would be indiscreet of me to add further editorial comment. Whatever you say, say it in private.

Efficiency, Economy Program Announced To Upgrade Medicaid

CHICAGO — The American Medical Association has announced a four-point program for efficiency and economy in Medicaid. Dr. Wilbur the Medicaid program, emphasizing that the need in meeting care is to be continued by health care requirements of the dedicated people. That their poor is to encourage participation, incentives and support be in by more physicians rather than fewer.

Dr. Dwight L. Wilbur, president of the AMA, says, "It is vital to increase the efficiency and economy of the rapidly growing Medicaid program. In 1968 it cost $3.5 billion and served 8.5 million people. It is likely that it will cost more than $4.8 billion and serve 10.2 million people in fiscal 1970."

While abuses are being found and eradicated, Dr. Wilbur indicates, "meaningful economies can come only from better efficiency management."

Resources to Purchase Care
When Medicaid was enacted, then Secretary of HEW, John Gardner, said, "Charity medicine is being abandoned in favor of new public programs which give needy people the resources to purchase medical care from private physicians and hospitals. The board appointed Victor on the same basis as more affluent citizens."

The four recommendations made by AMA are:
1—Emphasis on review by local medical societies of the use of expensive hospital and nursing home facilities. Nursing home charges account for one-third of all Medicaid costs. These patients could be well cared for in less-costly rest homes and by outpatient treatment, the AMA says.

2—Eradication by the medical profession of the isolated abuses by physicians in making unwarranted charges or other procedures that boost costs. Government will be urged to pursue the civil or criminal actions, if necessary, against offenders.

3—Solicitation of medical societies and individual physicians to bring health services into the low-income communities, where it will be more convenient to the patients and less expensive.

4—Review by medical societies to make certain the quality of health care provided is maintained even while cost efficiencies are affected.

Charles' Investiture in Wales Royal Show on Grand Scale

By DAVID LANCASHIRE

Associated Press Writer

CAERNARVON, Wales (AP)

— One of his royal forebears was a part-time ditch-digger who was pushed off the throne and murdered by his wife. Legend says another was smothered in prison. A third was terrified by visions of vampire bats.

For Charles Windsor, the future king of England, the main worry is whether rebellious Welshmen will pelt him with rotten eggs and tomatoes.

The threat to Charles, the 20-year-old student who is to be sworn in as Prince of Wales, comes from terrorists who want to sabotage Britain's biggest royal show since Queen Elizabeth II's 1953 coronation.

4,300 Guests

Next Tuesday 4,300 invited guests—courtiers, bluebloods, officials and Welsh dignitaries—will pack into Caernarvon's 13th century seaside castle for the investiture. About 250,000 visitors are expected to converge on this walled medieval town and people around the world will see the ceremony on television.

For Britain's security men, it will be a tense afternoon.

More than 2,500 troops will be on duty but almost all of them are ceremonial—Household Cavalrymen with swords and plumed helmets, Foot Guards in bearskin hats and 1,000 soldiers handling transportation, medical facilities and the other needs of a crowd.

The job of patrolling the eight-foot-thick castle walls, watching rooftops for potential snipers, and guarding remote Welsh hills is being left to police. Scotland Yard and Welsh police are keeping secret their plans for handling the challenge.

Power Lines

Security sources say the most likely targets are water pipelines or power pylons. Bombing a pipeline would disrupt water supplies in England. Blowing up the right electricity lines could black out the most ambitious TV spectacular ever staged in Britain.

The meandering back roads of Wales have signs of dissent—Free Welsh Army emblems, English road names painted out, "caution—revolution in progress" whitewashed on a stone bridge. Extra police already are on duty.

The police force in Aberystwyth, where Charles is studying Welsh, has quietly swollen from 16 men to about 117. Caernarvon's massive castle, bathed in floodlights, has been closed to the public since February, mostly for decoration but partly for security.

Charles himself revealed to an interviewer he was a trifle worried about demonstrations, but observed: "As long as I don't get covered in too much egg and tomato I'll be all right."

Welsh Ambassador

Still, a public opinion survey indicated 76 per cent of the Welsh people favor the investiture and three out of four Welshmen would like Charles to serve as a kind of ambassador the way his father, Prince Philip, represents Britain.

Then why the apprehensions?

Living in a land the size of New Jersey and best known for its coal mines, poets and singing, many a Welshman considers that Wales is considered just a cluster of counties on the west coast of England.

Wales, they argue, was once totally independent, it has a language older than English—about one-quarter of the 2.5-million population still speak it—and different blood in its people.

English Prince

"We do not want an English prince," they protest.

Welsh nationalists want more say in their own affairs. They object to English investment dominating the region and Welsh valleys being flooded to provide water for England—but they are orderly about their complaints.

Extremists, however, want complete independence and they stage the occasional bomb raid to back up their demands. They apparently number only a handful, and many nationalists denounce them as "apes." Nine have been tried for allegedly plotting to attack the castle and kill the prince on investiture day.

But Wales has had English princes before—20 of them in fact, since King Edward I defeated the towering castle of Caernarvon to keep them suppressed and proclaimed his son Prince of Wales in 1301. Before that, Wales had its own princes and legend says Edward was a cheat. He told the Welsh he was giving them a prince who was born in Wales and couldn't speak English—and then presented his newborn son from a cradle in the castle.

Edward Murdered

The baby became King Edward II, an uneducated ruler who preferred thatching roofs and digging ditches to statecraft. He was assassinated by princes came to a bad end. Edward V was supposedly smothered by a pillow as a boy prisoner in the Tower of London. George I was haunted by apparitions of monsters.

Today's Prince Charles is troubled by visions. What's more, the Welsh Herald Extraordinary says he is descending from the rebel Owain Glyndwr who won Wales briefly away from England around 1400. Charles, contends the Herald, is the most Welsh Prince of Wales in more than six centuries.

In the old days princes of Wales were more of less dictatorial English landlords who drained off the area's revenues. Charles owns vast land in Wales and after his investiture he will have an income of about $480,000 a year. But this comes from property in Cornwall and London; officials say his income from Wales will be negligible.

In Caernarvon (rhymes with car-bar-fun), it's difficult to find anyone against the prince or the big ceremony. Shopkeepers and officials are rubbing their hands. Houseowners are renting windows overlooking the town square and the castle.

Chairs To Be Sold

Officials spent $144,000 on decorations—plastic-topped thrones, plastic royal emblems designed by Princess Margaret's photographer husband Anthony Armstrong-Jones and theatrical experts, banners and bunting—and crested wooden seats for the official guests. The chairs are to be sold for $28.80 each after the ceremony to help recoup costs. Tickets for seats outside the fortress are going for $24.

Most princes have been quietly installed in London; Charles is only the third to be presented in a gala public pageant. The first was Edward II in 1301 and the last was Edward VIII—now the Duke of Windsor—just 58 years ago.

What bothered the Duke of Windsor most was the "preposterous rig" he had to wear for the ceremony—white satin knee breeches, a lengthy train and a jacket that looked like something from a deck of playing cards.

Charles is spared those embarrassments. He will wear an ermine mantle, a velvet cape and a streamlined crown with a three-foot gold-trimmed sword but underneath will be the trim blue uniform of the newly formed Royal Regiment of Wales. Charles has never done military service but he is the regiment's colonel in chief.

Gold-Trimmed Coach

The investiture processions set out from a brake-lining factory two miles from town. A Buckingham Palace official explained: "It's the only suitable site in the neighborhood."

Charles rides to the castle in a gold-trimmed coach surrounded by household Cavalry troops in plumed helmets. The queen, Prince Philip and Charles' 18-year-old sister Princess Anne set out 10 minutes later with a 21-gun salute.

Greeted at the Castle's Eagle Tower, Charles will wait while

Union Election Set

At Appleton Hospital

A union representation election for an estimated 146 employees will be conducted at Appleton Memorial Hospital Friday by the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission (WERC).

The election was scheduled after being petitioned for by the Service and Hospital Employees International Union, AFL-CIO.

The Milwaukee-based Local 150 has been stepping up its organizing effort in the Fox Valley and Northeastern Wisconsin.

About two years ago the union's attempt to represent a group of employees at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, was defeated at the ballot box.

Employees comprising the voting unit at Appleton Memorial include nurses aids, dietary, maintenance, laundry and

Registration Up for Campus Summer Term

350 Students to Begin Classes on Monday at Campus

Enrollment at the Fox Valley Campus, UWGB, continues to climb, according to Henry A. Spille, director of student affairs.

Some 350 students have registered for the summer term beginning Monday, and more are expected to sign up during the first week of classes.

"Young people want to continue their studies on a year-round basis," said Spille. "Although many have summer jobs, they can still fit in one or two courses during the afternoon or evening."

Spille also noted that many boys attend summer sessions to keep ahead of the new Selective Service policy that requires a demonstration of reasonable progress toward a college degree.

Some 100 of the summer students are "regulars" at the Fox Valley Campus during the academic year, Spille said. This

CITY OF APPLETON

Appleton, Wis.

THE BOARD OF APPEALS

By C. A. MAGNETTE,

Secretary

June 24-25-26, 1969.

First Wisconsin Charge Card.

Announcing the explicit bill...the bill you might even like.

Now you'll know who charged what...and when...and where.

Remember how it used to be when you charged something at a store?

You'd get a bill that told you exactly what you had bought—where you bought it, of course, the date of the purchase—and you even got a sales slip that had your signature on it. You had proof of purchase.

Then along came computers—and some charge account bills began to read like this: Stock item 1138—department 14—amount, $7.95. Stock item 647—department 9—amount, $27.89. Total, $35.84.

Not much help, was it? Not only was it hard for you to recall what the purchase might have been—it was practically impossible to verify which member of your family made the purchase.

Progress from the past.

You won't be getting bills like that now, when you shop with your First Wisconsin Charge Card.

Instead, you'll get detailed information—on the bill itself—including the posting date of the purchase—the name of the retailer—and the amount of the purchase. We feel that's the least we should do. So we're going to do even more.

Now, your brand new First Wisconsin Charge Card bill will include good old-fashioned sales slips—signed by you—or by a member of your family.

Now your First Wisconsin Charge Card statement will tell all.

It's the explicit bill.

Wide acceptance... but just one monthly bill.

Your First Wisconsin Charge Card is welcome at more than 13,000 member stores and service outlets throughout the state. But no matter how many places you use your Charge Card, you get just one monthly bill. You make out just one check. That alone saves you a lot of time and irksome bookkeeping.

Your new First Wisconsin Charge Card statement will not only help you to manage your family finances, it will also provide you with a permanent record of whatever finance charges are involved to help you at income tax time.

An invitation.

If you've never had a First Wisconsin Charge Card—or if you don't have a current, valid card, apply for one now. It's really the most convenient way of shopping in our modern, mobile society. Ask any participating retailer or sponsoring bank for an application form. Or, just send the coupon and you'll hear from us within a few days.
